State Beer Bill Hits Senate Snag

U. S. SEEKS AKRON CRASH CAUSE

Today

The Akron.
Roosevelt Common Sense.
A Bill of Mystery.
Tall Sisters and Dwarfs.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

MIAMI, Fla., April 5.

THE GIANT AIRSHIP, Akron, biggest in the world, is wrecked off the coast of New Jersey, much as the French dirigible, taken from Germany, was destroyed, flying above the Mediterranean.

The loss of the Akron, which will depress the nation, will not discourage flying, by dirigible or otherwise.

THERE IS pleasing common sense in Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt's statement on beer.

"When it is legal to serve beer in any government house, it will naturally be proper to do so for any one who desires it at the White House."

Mrs. Roosevelt, a good citizen, hopes that legal beer will discourage bootlegging and adds this sound thought to her expression of opinion:

"I myself do not drink anything with alcoholic content, but that is purely an individual thing. I could not dream of forcing my own convictions on other people, as long as they live up to the law of our land."

If some prohibition enthusiasts had possessed Mrs. Roosevelt's common sense, this country might have escaped its crime wave and bootleg era, much to its advantage.

WITH MUCH HASTE, and with no definite information given to the public, the House of Representatives passes a bill fixing criminal penalties for "unauthorized publication of official documents."

Congressmen are being asked whether this new bill might be used to cover up mistakes or corruption of government officials, whether the bill could conveniently help to cover up waste of public money, or commit secret agreements with other countries, made without letting the people know about them.

Those that established this government, with a good deal of common sense, were especially interested in protecting the right of the people to know what was being done by the government, which, after all, belongs to them.

MR. RINGLING imports the extremes of size among human beings, two sisters, Anna and Dora Van Droysen. Anna is 7 feet 4 inches tall, her sister just 8 feet.

They are here for the circus and smile pleasantly. With them came the Schneider family, the shortest 36 inches tall, the tallest 43 inches. These interesting creatures, big and little, remind circus-goers of the goodness of Providence that keeps human beings at about the same size, making tall, thin men marry short, fat women and the other way round.

Thus we do not become a human "bench show" ranging from Irish wolfhounds in size to Pekinese.

NEWS FROM Germany tells you that the number of Jewish brokers on the stock exchange in Frankfort has been cut from 33 to 8, and the number of Jewish lawyers allowed to practice limited to 35 in Berlin.

This reveals the "milk in the cocoanut," which is in Germany as elsewhere not in the least a question of religion but of business competition.

PROTESTANT NAZIS holding a great convention come equipped with exact information as regards God's wishes. He orders the Nazis to celebrate their "victory over the satanic forces of the underworld and furthermore," says the Rev. Herr Peter, "We must not be simply Christians, God wants us to be German Christians." Assuming that to be fact, it is surprising that God did not make Germans only, which would simplify matters.

FOUR BRITONS, the Marquis of Clydesdale, Lieut. Col. L. V. Stewart Black, Flight Lieut. D. F. McIntyre and a photographer named Bonnett have flown over Mount Everest, highest peak in the Himalayan Mountains, highest peak on earth.

The British airplane did in 90 minutes what men have repeatedly failed to do after months of struggling, often leaving their bones on the sides of the mountain in their climbing attempts. And the airplane photographer will give such exact pictures of Himalayan peaks and valleys as no climbing explorers could give.

Mighty is the airplane. With it you may cover in an hour the territory over which Moses wandered forty years.

MICHIGAN reports a "wet landslide" on the subject of taking prohibition out of the Constitution. Other states will similarly vote "for repal of the Eighteenth Amendment."

But this does not mean ultimate REPEAL. Thirty-six states must vote wet before prohibition can be taken out of the Constitution and before bootlegging can cease to be a great industry.

That thirty-six states will vote to end prohibition is not certain or even probable.

THE BRITISH take seriously the rights of their citizens in other countries and do not like Russia's action arresting half a dozen British business men in Moscow on charges of "sabotage," which, in this case, means interference with Russia's industrial plans.

The British do not want to supply scapegoats for Russian failure, and when the six trials are over Britain plans an intense trade war and boycott on Russia to teach Russians respect for the subjects of King George.

FIRST JOB ARMY TO LEAVE

900 From Pittsburgh Ordered in Initial Detachment

Washington today ordered recruiting to begin tomorrow throughout the country of 25,000 men for the forest army for shipment to southern army camps to be conditioned.

Pittsburgh's quota was set at 900 unmarried men with dependents, but no instructions had been received by any local agency as to the method of recruiting the men.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—(AP.)—The first 25,000 men, who will form part of the conservation corps, will be sent to military camps for conditioning beginning tomorrow.

President Roosevelt, by executive order today, set aside $10,000,000 of unexpended construction funds to begin his forest conservation employment program.

Quotas from which the first detachment will be drawn have been fixed for 17 cities.

900 FROM PITTSBURGH

The first group will be selected as follows:

New York City, 7,500; Buffalo, 600; Chicago, 4,000; Philadelphia, 3,000; Pittsburgh, 900; Detroit, 2,100; Cleveland, 1,000; Cincinnati, 500; St. Louis, 900; Kansas City, 400; Baltimore, 1,000; Boston, 900; Milwaukee, 600; Washington, 500; Minneapolis, and St. Paul, 600, and Newark, 500.

The first contingent will be selected from among men most in need of help and whose circumstances are fully and accurately known.

The Labor Department decided today that the camps will be operated on a five-day working basis with a maximum of 40 hours a week. Pay will be at the rate

HERRON PUSHES WAR ON 'SPEAKS'

Acting Mayor Herron's orders to close law-breaking clubs and speakeasies are being heeded in "certain quarters," he said today, hinting that unlesss the police generally obey his mandate, trouble will follow.

Herron said:

"I have informed the police department of my wishes as acting Mayor. The department will be given time to carry out my instructions. If this is not done it will be construed as evidence that they were out of sympathy with this program.

"I have received reports, however, that there is co-operation in certain sections."

Ex-Senator Leslie Reported Improved

Former State Senator Max G. Leslie, seriously ill in his home, 243 Fisk street, was reported somewhat improved today. His health has been poor for the last year.

STATE BEER BILL SNAGS IN SENATE

Control of Licenses By 2-Party Political Boards Opposed

By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURG, April 5.—The Sowers-Conner anti-administration beer bill swayed against a parliamentary lamp post in the Senate this afternoon and all but fell.

Wet Republicans, dry Republicans, and some Democrats crossed up the Democrats of the House and threatened to beat the bill unless the provision for regional bi-partisan political commissions to grant retail licenses was stricken out.

DELAYS ACTION

So serious was the opposition to the bill that Senator John J. McClure, chairman of the Finance Committee, which reported the bill to the floor with the amendments demanded by the House Democrats, did not call the bill up this afternoon before the Senate recessed.

There was insistence that the right to license be given to the county courts, and it was reported that 28 Senators were prepared to support this plan as against the pledged amendment which satisfied the House Democrats when they voted for the bill early Tuesday morning.

This new beer fog has served to surround the question with even greater confusion, and make problematical the question as to whether any beer bill will go to the Governor by Thursday night.

There remains little doubt the Governor will veto the measure in any form, insisting upon his own bill, which would put licensing in the hands of the Department of Revenue.

SENATE CITES COST

In the Senate it was charged that the cost of commission license administration would run to about $600,000.

As amended, the Democrats succeeded in securing representation on bi-partisan politically-colored license boards. Judges in Philadelphia are made the licensing boards. Nine other license zones are set up for the issuance of retail licenses. Allegheny County constitutes one zone. Each board is to consist of three members at $3,000 each.

Retail licenses for Pittsburgh will cost $250. Manufacturers' licenses will cost $1,000.

Half the tax goes to the state and half to the counties. The license fees are to be divided 10 per cent to the state, 10 per cent to the counties of origin, 40 per cent to municipalities and 40 per cent to school districts. The tax is placed at $1 a barrel.

Fish Caught by F. R. In Chicago Exhibit

CHICAGO, April 5.—(AP.)—Green trigger fish caught by President Roosevelt have arrived in Chicago and are now swimming around a tank in the Shedd Aquarium, officials announced today.

The fish were taken from the sea alive by the President and his party on their cruise on the Astor yacht prior to his inauguration.

Pitt Bans Beer; Tech, Duquesne Stand By

Beer-drinking and wine-sipping—even if confined to the 3.2 per cent variety—will not be part of the curriculum at the University of Pittsburgh.

Duquesne University doesn't consider it even a question.

Carnegie Tech has taken no action on whether to permit use of the milder wines and beer after midnight tomorrow.

But there is no doubt about the meaning of the rules adopted by the board of trustees' executive committee at Pitt:

1—Beer and wine shall not be sold or used on any property of the university.

2—There shall be no advertising of beer, wine or liquor of any kind in any university publications.

3—There shall be no use or sale of beer, wine or liquor of any kind at meetings or social functions held under auspices of recognized university activities or organizations.

At a meeting last night the Inter-Fraternity Council at Pitt voted to ban all liquors from fraternity houses and functions sponsored by them.

Duquesne's president, Father J. J. Callahan, told a Sun-Telegraph reporter he hadn't even thought of beer's being a college problem and added:

"I'll handle the question after it arises, if it does."

Whitney, Roosevelt Confer on Means of Regulating Stocks

House Told Billions Of 'Questionable' Securities Sold

WASHINGTON, April 5.—(AP.)—Richard F. Whitney, president of the New York Stock Exchange, was given an opportunity today to lay his views before President Roosevelt on what form of federal regulation of the stock exchanges should be employed.

Whitney was granted an appointment with the President at about the same time that Huston Thompson, a former member of the Federal Trade Commission, was telling the House Commerce Committee that between $13,000,000,000 and $14,000,000,000 of questionable securities had been issued in New York state since 1928.

Appearing before the committee at its last open hearing on the administration securities regulation bill, Thompson, a co-author of the measure, said that the investment bankers were attempting to defeat the purpose of the bill and limit it to blue sky fraud prosecutions.

TESTIMONY ASSAILED

Assailing the testimony yesterday of W. C. Breed, of New York, counsel of the American Investment Bankers' Association, who urged the elimination of the provision permitting the Federal Trade Commission to revoke registration of securities, Thompson said:

"If you are going to wait until fraud is shown, then there is no use of going along with this bill.

"If the argument of Mr. Breed is followed, then issues such as the Kreuger & Toll securities and the Insull issues could not be curbed."

'RETURN GOLD,' F. R. ORDERS

WASHINGTON, April 5.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt today ordered the return of all gold over $100 held by individuals to the Federal Reserve system before May 1.

In the same executive order, the President authorized the Secretary of the Treasury to issue licenses permitting the use of gold in necessary domestic and foreign trade transactions.

For violation of the order the President decreed a maximum fine of $10,000 and imprisonment of 10 years, or both.

The order was issued to get such gold as is still in hoarding and to ease the national embargo to permit legitimate transactions under federal license.

Missouri Convicts Fight Prison Flames

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., April 5.—(AP.)—Convicts assisted the city fire department in extinguishing a blaze which started today in the saw mill of the Missouri Penitentiary chair factory.

Prison officials said there were no disorders among the inmates. The origin of the fire was indetermined. Damage was placed at $12,500.

15,000 Pupils Strike to Aid Teachers

In defiance of school authorities' pleas and warnings against the futility of such moves, 4,500 pupils of Calumet High School and 6,000 from Crane Junior College and High School left their desks.

American Heiress Weds French Student

PARIS, April 5.—(AP.)—Eleanor Post Close, 23, one of America's richest heiresses, and a French student, Marie Etienne Robert Gautier, 25, were married today in the Church of St. Philippe du Roule.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Edward F. Hutton, of New York, the granddaughter of the late C. W. Post and the former wife of Preston Sturges, the playwright.

'Romanoff Prince' Jailed 3 Months

NEW YORK, April 5.—(AP.)—Harry F. Gerguson, who has traveled past many immigration barriers as "Prince Michael Romanoff," was sentenced today to three months' imprisonment on his plea of guilty to perjury, evading immigration officers and re-entering the country after being deported.

TRUNK OF SLAIN MAID SEARCHED

A trunk of Hilda Lindberg, East End maid, found beaten to death near Peabody High School last Saturday, was being searched today for a clue to her slayer.

This morning a half brother and three women friends, questioned by Sergt. Sam Wheeler, of the homicide squad, failed to produce a tangible clue. All admitted the dead woman had spoken of a "boy friend," but his identity never was revealed.

Elmer Carlson, 1930 River street, McKeesport, a half brother, said Miss Lindberg once spoke of a man who owned a big light colored car and when asked what he worked at, replied:

"Oh, I don't know, but he is some kind of a smuggler."

Miss Hilda Swanson, 607 Seventeenth avenue, Munhall; Mrs. Julia Lawson, of 1813 Sumac street, McKeesport, and Mrs. Ola Larson, of McKeesport, who knew the woman for 23 years, said she always was secretive about herself, her associates and her habits.

Detectives discovered Miss Lindberg had sold about 50 shares of stock early in March. No trace of the money has been found. It is believed she turned it over to some speculator to invest.

WASHINGTON SPURS RIGID PROBE

Senate and House in Move for Full Investigation

NEW YORK, April 5.—(AP.)—The troubled waters off the Jersey coast today held most of the evidence which might lead to determination of the cause of the airship Akron's crash at sea with a loss of 73 lives.

But official forces moved swiftly to use what little evidence and direct testimony was still available toward solution of the secret of history's greatest tragedy of the air.

In Washington, Chairman Vinson named a House naval subcommittee to begin an investigation early next week, while a demand was made for an inquiry by a special committee "not directly interested in either the Army or Navy."

GO TO WASHINGTON

Lieut. Commander Herbert V. Wiley and the only other survivors, M. E. Erwin and Richard Deal, were proceeding by air to Washington under orders to report to Rear Admiral Pratt, chief of naval operations. After being rescued from the sea they were brought here yesterday and spent the night in the Naval Hospital.

The only physical evidence for investigators to study was held by the Navy here, a section of bent ventilating tube which was the only piece of wreckage from the great ship recovered.

But there was still hope that more wreckage might be found off the Jersey shore to serve as mute testimony of the tense moments when Wiley stood calmly in the Akron's control room and realized that a crash was inevitable.

Ships and planes coursed back and forth across the stormy waters in ceaseless search for anything which might give some hint as to exactly what caused the Akron, caught in a fierce electric storm, to descend so rapidly that there was only an interlude of 30 seconds between the moment when Wiley gave the order to stand by for a crash and the time when the Akron struck the water.

Another object of the search was to recover bodies of the missing airmen, but this part of the search was no longer spurred on by any hope that more survivors would be found.

As the search went on this morning the report came in from the scene of the disaster that the little Navy blimp J 3, which also crashed in the waves while on rescue duty, had sunk during salvage operations.

Two men were lost with the J 3 and five were saved.

CALLED TO WASHINGTON

Wiley made a brief official report by wireless while on his way to the hospital yesterday and later gave an interview in which he painted a dramatic picture of the crash and expressed the opinion that the Akron had not been struck by lightning.

At that interview, however, he declined to discuss technical possibilities concerning the crash and it was assumed at naval headquarters here that it was for a detailed statement along this line that the survivors were called to rush to Washington today.

One voluntary witness presented himself at naval headquarters this morning to tell of passing the airship at sea 23 minutes before the crash. He was Second Officer Mulke, of the liner Algonquin, and he said that at 12:10 a. m. yester-

Einstein's 2 Daughters Flee From Germany

COQ-SUR-MER, Belgium, April 5.—(AP.)—Prof. Albert Einstein's two daughters have fled from Germany, the scientist declared today.

Mrs. Einstein learned that the elder daughter had fled when she telephoned her home in Berlin and was told by a weeping servant that her mistress had left secretly for the frontier.

Prof. Einstein, who arrived in Belgium recently after a visit to the United States, said last week that he had renounced his German citizenship because of mistreatment accorded his daughters by German National-Socialists. The nature of the mistreatment was not described.

WISCONSIN VOTES 5 TO 1 FOR REPEAL OF PROHIBITION

DRYS CONCEDE ROUT OF ALL CANDIDATES

Michigan Poll Shows Election of 99 Wet Delegates, Lone Foe

MILWAUKEE, Wis., April 5.—(AP.)—At Wisconsin's constitutional convention three weeks hence the vote for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment will be unanimous.

Returns from yesterday's election showed a vote of almost 5 to 1 in favor of wiping out the prohibition amendment. The results, with 1,829 of the 2,899 precincts tabulated, was:

CONCEDE WET VICTORY

Prohibitionists conceded that repealists had elected every one of their 15 candidates to the April 25 convention. Anti - prohibition leaders expressed jubilation, declaring the overwhelming victory would energize their cause in other states.

Dr. J. J. Seelman, Milwaukee, chairman of the Wisconsin Division of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, said:

"The vote in Wisconsin, coupled with the splendid victory in Michigan, marks the beginning of the end of prohibition. The tremendous majorities for repeal in these two states which have been in the doubtful column can now be placed in the repeal column."

Milwaukee did about as expected—voting 12 to 1 for repeal.

MICHIGAN VOTE

DETROIT, April 5.—(AP.)—Ninety-nine "ayes" and a lone "no" apparently will be Michigan's answer to the question of national prohibition repeal when its constitutional convention assembles next Monday.

The one dry delegate is from rural Barry County. His margin was 236 out of 7,062 votes cast.

The wet majorities staggered even the most optimistic of anti-prohibition campaigners. Detroit was in the van, voting down the Eighteenth Amendment by more than eight to one.

For the state at large, with six-sevenths of the more than 1,000,000 votes tabulated, the total was:

For repeal, 754,838.
Against, 243,030.

That, however, had no official bearing on the result, as the delegates all were elected by districts.

When those delegates meet on Monday, Michigan will become the first state to ratify the repeal amendment to the Federal Constitution.

DRYS LOSE IN S. C.

COLUMBUS, S. C., April 5.—(AP.)—South Carolina today had taken two steps toward reversal of the state's traditional stand against alcoholic beverages.

After a stormy hearing, the Senate Finance Committee voted to report favorably on beer legalization legislation, and a short time later the House passed a bill providing for a state-wide election November 7 to elect delegates to a state convention to act on repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

The House had already passed, by an overwhelming margin, a bill providing for immediate legalization of 3.2 per cent beer.

Canada Lifts Ban On Beer Exports

OTTAWA, Ont., April 5.—(AP.)—The Canadian government has given official notice that after Thursday the ban will be lifted against exports to the United States of beer, ale, porter, wine and similar beverages containing not more than 3.2 per cent alcohol by weight.

Notices to this effect have been sent by the Department of National Revenue to its collectors.

Milwaukee Plane To Rush Beer to F. R.

MILWAUKEE, April 5.—This beer manufacturing city's beer "ship," an airplane loaded with two cases of beer for presentation to President Roosevelt, is ready to zoom away to Washington at midnight tomorrow.

BEER HERE GOES BY AIR TO F. R.

The brewer's big horses—3,780 motor power ones—stood ready today to rush the new 3.2 beer to President Roosevelt and other government officials in Washington.

Fifty cases will be shipped from St. Louis, and probably a like amount from Pittsburgh, in addition to six half barrels. The St. Louis shipment, coming from the Anheuser-Busch, Inc., will be brought into Pittsburgh in a trimotored plane by Transcontinental and Western Air, Inc.

Two big tri-motored ships, powered with three motors of 420-horsepower each of the Pennsylvania Airlines, will stand by to pick up the shipments for distribution in Washington and Cleveland.

The Independent Brewery has prepared a special case for President Roosevelt. This and others from St. Louis will make up the Washington shipment. Another load, consisting of six half barrels, will be consigned to a hotel in Cleveland.

The shipments, according to present plans, will leave Pittsburgh Friday morning.

Beer Agreement Fails in New York

ALBANY, April 5.—(INS.)—All hope of an immediate break in the deadlock between Gov. Herbert H. Lehman and the Republicans over state control of beer was abandoned today and the Legislative chiefs turned their attention to the preparation of a temporary measure.

Beer will go on tap throughout the state Friday, regardless of the deadlock, and the leaders are anxious to rush through a bill suggesting the manner in which cities, villages and towns should regulate the beer traffic, pending enactment of a state law.

Washington Likely To Get Beer Friday

WASHINGTON, April 5.—(AP.)—Beer will be sold here after midnight Thursday if President Roosevelt signs the District of Columbia control bill before then.

The House was set to complete Congressional action today.

CURB EXCHANGE HEADS QUIZZED

NEW YORK, April 5.—(AP.)—Investigation of alleged abuses on the New York Curb Exchange was begun today by the Bureau of Securities of the state Attorney General's office, with a preliminary private hearing.

Howard C. Sykes, president of the exchange, was the first witness. He was accompanied by Mortimer Landsberg, chairman of the listing committee of the exchange; William A. Lockwood, counsel for the exchange, and William S. Muller, former president.

All four appeared voluntarily and were closeted with Assistant Attorney General John F. X. McGohey.

McGohey explained that the hearing was private and was in the nature of a preliminary hearing to determine what procedure would follow.

SENATE PROBES 'CENSOR' BILL

WASHINGTON, April 5.—(AP.)—The Senate Foreign Relations Committee today invited representatives of the State and Justice departments to appear tomorrow to explain the reasons behind the bill passed hurriedly by the House Monday to invoke heavy penalties for publication of secret government information.

Chairman Pittman reiterated the bill would be revised to remove grounds for criticism that it would "reach the innocent as well as the guilty" and might censor the press.

The State Department said it recommended the legislation to protect unauthorized publication of its secret codes. It is understood a book including some of this information was about to be published.

Pittman said the general belief was the bill should be limited to penalties for publication of "confidential code messages exchanged between the government and its representatives abroad," he added:

"It is the unanimous opinion of the committee that Section 2 (applying to publishers of any unauthorized government matter which may prove "prejudicial to the safety' of the nation) is too broad and too indefinite."

of $30 a month, payable twice a month.

W. Frank Persons, whose services have been given the Labor Department by the American Public Welfare Association, to direct the enrollment, said only unmarried men from 18 to 25 years of age who have dependent relatives for whose benefit they voluntarily desire to allot a substantial part of their cash allowance will be eligible in the selection of the first group.

EXPLAINS PROCEDURE

Persons explained how the men will be chosen in this statement:

"The selection will be made under authority of the Labor Department by established state or city relief administrations which are actively assisting those known to be the most in need of employment and who have records of their names, addresses and circumstances.

"There will be no registration of applications at public places unless or until this class of eligible young men has been fully provided for.

"The enrollment will be so governed that ultimately from each state a fair quota will be selected. These quotas will be selected on the basis of the population of the state as related to the population of the whole country.

"Enrollment will be maintained in advance of the actual employment requirements in such measure that a sufficient time, perhaps 10 days or more, will be possible in the conditioning camps, where preliminary instructions in camp life and suitable phyhical training may be carried out to best fit the men to be competent, self-sustaining work units.

SPEED PROMISED

"Enrollment cannot begin in every state simultaneously but it will be established in every state as rapidly as administrative organizations can be established for the purpose and as determined by the geographical locations of the work sites. It is intended, of course, to employ men as near as possible to the place of employment."

Confusion Here Over Washington's Order

Confusion resulted in the ranks of unemployed here today as word came from Washington that recruiting of 900 unmarried men for employment in the government forest army was beginning here tomorrow.

The army recruiting service had expected to have the job of recruiting the men here, but its officers had received no instructions.

The announcement at Washington of the qualifications of those who will be enlisted indicated that relief agencies would probably be called upon to supply the recruits from the ranks of those upon their lists.

At the office of the Allegheny County Emergency Association and other relief agencies it was learned that no word had been received.

The Emergency Association reported that the listing of the eligible unmarried men, between 18 and 25, with dependents, now on the relief files, could be done in four hours. The Family Welfare likewise reported it could quickly list the eligibles.

URGE INFLATION OF CURRENCY AS FARM AID

Relief Bill Alone Won't Restore Prosperity, Senate Told

WASHINGTON, April 5.—(INS.)—Demand for immediate adoption of a policy of inflating the currency was made of the administration today by the Senate Agriculture Committee in a report recommending immediate enactment of the new farm and mortgage relief bill.

Passage of the relief measure alaone, the committeee declared, will not restore prosperity to the farms.

It insisted that the dollar must be stabilized and the farmer given a dollar that can buy 100 cents worth of industrial products. The report stated:

"No substantial relief is possible for agriculture until the policy of deflation is not only checked, but reversed and a substantial sum of money is admitted and, if need be, forced into circulation.

"We report that it is not sufficient to have an ample supply of currency in the vaults of the Federal Reserve banks, and that it is not even sufficient to have an ample supply of currency in the vaults of the national, state and private banks of the country."

The committee unanimously recommended inflation. It did not recommend any particular plan, since its members were divided between remonetization of silver, reduction of the gold content of the dollar and several other plans.

It condemned the Federal Reserve System, charging it had "failed in the recent monetary crisis. It declared the system had permitted 25 billion dollars of permitted $25,000,000,000 of bank credit to be cancelled and destroyed since the start of the banking crisis.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—(AP.)—The Administration's broad farm mortgage relief bill was approved today by the Senate Banking Committee.

to their issues to the Federal Trade Commission as well as filing it with the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Representative Sabath (Dem.), of Illinois, charged that Whitney had "refused to stop the practice of buying up a lot of little businesses and issuing worthless stock to the public."

'APPEALED TO MORGAN'

Sabath said that he pleaded "with the house of Morgan" to prevent the sale of "worthless securities." He declared

"I investigated and found out that the house of Morgan sold 263,000,000 shares of stock within three years and that the difference in their actual value and the cost to the people who bought them was $17,700,000,000."

Asked by Representative Wolverton (Rep.), of New Jersey, about a protest the Chicago Association of Commerce sent to President Roosevelt against the securities bill, Sabath said:

"Oh, I know that crowd. Silas Strawn, the big attorney; the Chicago Board of Trade and the Chicago Stock Exchange is behind that protest."

FAIL TO AGREE ON BANK BILL

WASHINGTON, April 5.—(AP.)—The Glass sub-committee of the Senate Banking Committee failed today to reach an agreement on permanent bank revision legislation and another meeting was called for tomorrow.

The committee is seeking legislation based upon the bill sponsored in the last session by Senator Glass to curb the use of Federal Reserve credit for speculative purposes.

Several important changes are being considered, however, including provision for a deposit insurance fund for Federal Reserve member banks.

One of the points of controversy in the sub-committee is the extent to which national banks should be permitted to engage in branch banking.

M'LUCAS HEADS DETROIT BANK

KANSAS CITY, April 5.—(AP.)—Walter S. McLucas, who in 25 years has become one of the Southwest's most dynamic and powerful banking figures, yesterday announced acceptance of the presidency of Detroit's new national bank, a development of the post-banking holiday period. He is 57.

He will take to the new bank, which replaces the First National Bank and Guardian National Bank of Commerce of Detroit, a record of swift advancement which led him to the active head of the Commerce Trust Company here, the Southwest's largest bank.

He withdrew from the presidency in 1926 in favor of James M. Kemper and took his present post of chairman of the board. During 1921 he was vice president of the National City Bank, of New York, then the nation's largest bank.

McKeesport Man To Liquidate Bank

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., April 5.—R. B. Herbertson, McKeesport, has been named receiver for the closed Federal Title and Trust Company here, by W. D. Gordon, secretary of banking. He will succeed Joseph L. Reeves, Beaver Falls, resigned.

M'DONALD DUE IN U. S. TO SEE ROOSEVELT

British Premier Will Arrive This Month For Debt Parley

By HARRY K. REYNOLDS
International News Service.

LONDON, April 5.—Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald will sail for the United States on April 15 to discuss the foreign debt and other economic problems with President Roosevelt, it was learned by International News Service today.

The Prime Minister has booked passage aboard the Cunard liner Berengaria.

There was a possibility, however, he might advance the date of his departure and sail aboard the Olympic, leaving April 12.

Official announcement of his impending departure is expected to be made shortly.

It awaits only a formal invitation from President Roosevelt. The American chief executive has indicated he would welcome a visit by Premier MacDonald.

BRIEF STAY

According to present plans, MacDonald will remain in the United States only a few days, departing from New York on April 29.

While the Washington conversations will be aimed to expedite the world economic conference, MacDonald is expected to make strong efforts to obtain a moratorium on the June 15 British foreign debt installment to the United States.

It was reported British debt experts will leave for Washington next week, according to present tentative plans. They are Sir Frederick Leith-Ross and Layton F. Waley, who was said to be the principal author of the British debt note sent to the United States last December, in which the British argument for cancellation or revision was set forth.

The Daily Mail said Norman H. Davis, American Ambassador-at-Large, had presented a debt revision offer to the British government which is now under consideration. It would cut the British debt to America by more than £200,000,000, the paper said.

Roosevelt Issues Statement Inviting MacDonald

WASHINGTON, April 5.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt issued a statement today expressing the hope Prime Minister MacDonald could visit him here to confer on world economic and arms questions.

His statement said:

"In the course of informal exchanges of views between the British and ourselves regarding the general economic question and the problem of disarmament, the President has felt that a visit to Washington by the Prime Minister would be helpful.

"The President ever since his first conversation with the British ambassador at Warm Springs has emphasized his hope that the Prime Minister would come over."

While no mention of France was made in the statement, Foreign Minister Paul-Boncour has assured Norman H. Davis, special Ambassador-at-Large, that his government would send representatives to such a parley as the President contemplates.

It was MacDonald who came here before the London naval conference and in a simple, unpretentious meeting with President Hoover on the banks of the Rapidan paved the way for Anglo-American co-operation at that conference.

Preliminary World Parley At Washington Slated

PARIS, April 5. — (AP.) — An initial world economic conference will be held in Washington under arrangements being made during the present tour of European capitals by Norman H. Davis, United States Ambassador-at-Large.

France has joined Great Britain in agreeing to send representatives to the American capital for the meeting, at which all countries could be represented.

The purpose would be to make final preparations for the general world economic conference which is being planned for London within a few months.

It was said in American quarters here that British and American views on the economic conference had been brought closer together by Davis' visit last weekend in London.

France Backs League Sway on Peace Plan

PARIS, April 5.—(AP.)—The cabinet today approved along essential lines the French memorandum on the Italo-British four-power peace plan, throwing the pact within the structure of the League of Nations.

Kephart Awaits Call To Run for Governor

By AL GOUGH
Staff Correspondent.

BROOKVILLE, Pa., April 4.—Supreme Court Justice John W. Kephart is not a candidate for the governorship of Pennsylvania—but he would be "if forced as a duty."

"Not yet, but soon."

He has not formally announced his candidacy, nor will he, unless, to use his own words:

"Conditions may arise that would force me to become a candidate as a duty.

"If I believe that the welfare of the state would be advanced by my becoming a candidate, of course I should do so."

Justice Kephart said he was "happy on the bench."

He was the principal speaker at the annual dinner of the Jefferson County Bar Association, held in the Pinecrest County Club here.

After the brief reference to his possible candidacy, Justice Kephart launched into an address in support of the visiting judge system as it is practiced chiefly in this end of the state by Allegheny County. He praised its economy and effectiveness and declared the system saves Allegheny County thousands of dollars annually.

Judge Elder M. Marshall, of Allegheny County, also was a speaker. He, too, expressed himself as being in accord with the visiting judge system. Other speakers included Superior Court Judge William M. Parker, Prof. J. Warren Madden, of the University of Pittsburgh; Maj. Raymond E. Brown, and Attorney Charles J. Margiotti, of Pittsburgh, who was presented with a birthday cake by his associates. Margiotti is a native of Jefferson County.

Russia Fears 'Plot,' British Envoy Says

LONDON, April 5.—(AP.)—Sir Esmond Ovey, recalled British ambassador to Moscow, said today the Russian government has worked itself into a state of "morbid hysteria" in fearing a world conspiracy against it. Sir Esmond is not expected to return to Moscow.

In a white paper which was before the House of Commons today, Sir Esmond vigorously attacked the Soviet officials for the manner in which they have treated six British prisoners who are facing trial in Moscow on charges of espionage, punishable by death.

The General Electric Company of America was declared "seriously worried" about its position in Russia as a result of the case in a message sent here by the ambassador. The white paper contained his correspondence with Sir Robert Vansittart, Under Secretary for foreign affairs.

Sir Robert said he told the Russian ambassador in London that the prosecution of the British subjects was "a stage performance, and a very bad one at that, mounted simply to disguise, by serving up scapegoats, the ill-success of certain industrial undertakings in Russia."

DRAMATIC STORY OF SURVIVORS' FIGHT FOR LIVES TOLD

ONE SLIPS OFF GAS TANK TO SEA GRAVE

Three Lock Arms to Keep From Sliding Into Ocean

NEW YORK, April 5.—(INS.)—A dramatic story came to light today of how four members of the crew of the Akron struggled in the black waters of the Atlantic immediately after the crash; how they recognized each other between lightning flashes as they clung to a gasoline tank and how finally one of them—Lucian Rutan, machinist's mate—slipped into the sea to his death before the agonized eyes of his companions.

There they were, on different parts of the Akron, when the crash came, rending the metal and fabric. Into the sea they were tossed semi-conscious but still alive!

As the four men swam about blindly in the murky, foggy night they reached out and touched buoyant. It was a gasoline tank!

FOUR GRASP TANK

Four sets of fingers pull four heads over the edge of the tank, four hearts skip a beat or two, and four souls send up a prayer of thanks to God.

One is Boatswain's Mate Richard E. Deal.

One is Metalsmith Moody E. Irwin.

And the other is Rutan.

They say to one another,

"Hello."

Deal asks:

"Any others?"

Their eyes search the tossing, icy waters.

They shake their heads.

"Good God!"

SEE SHIP FADING

They look again. Fading away before the surface gale they see the ghostly, ghastly hulk that had been the flying coffin for three score men and ten—it's the only sign on all the tossing, dead gray wet expanse.

Their eyes come back over the flat top of their floating gas can.

Rutan says:

"All gone."

His hands, and those of Irwin are red, raw, bloody, where the skin and flesh has given way over burns and cuts.

His fingers start to slip.

Deal tells him:

"Hang on, boy."

Rutan looks back, and forces a wistful sort of smile, says:

"As long as I can."

HOLDS COPELAND ON

Copeland's head sinks forward. It seems he's about to slip off. Irwin reaches across a corner of their floating gas can and catches Copeland's sleeves.

They are locked, so, across the corner of the can.

Deal says:

"Hold it, buddy, I'm coming over to you."

An inch at a time Deal starts to edge his way along the slippery tank. There can be no sudden movement. That might disclose Copeland and Irwin, grimly draped across the opposite corner.

Slowly—slowly—

Then Rutan's eyes catch those of Deal. The wistful smile comes again to Rutan's lips.

'NEVER MIND, BUDDY'

He says:

"Never mind, buddy. Never mind about me."

There are not four on the floating gas can now. There are three. They hang grimly on.

Copeland is completely out. Irwin's burned and lacerated hands are torture. They decide to shift positions. Deal takes one of Copeland's arms and one of Irwin's. Irwin takes one arm of Copeland and one of Deal. A triangle of arms hold the three above the surface.

Perhaps it's minutes, perhaps hours. Time untracks for these three, fighting, alone, with the tenacious training of men who go to sea, to keep their lives, to thwart the clutching demons of cold, of exhaustion, that reach up with cramping fingers to drag

CULT SACRIFICE TRIALS SET

INEZ, Ky., April 5.—(AP.)—Trials of nine men and women indicted as a result of the "human sacrifice" slaying of an aged mountain woman will begin here tomorrow. They are charged with murder, conspiracy to murder and aiding and abetting.

Mrs. Lucinda Mills was found choked to death and bound in chains in a mountain cabin in February. Officers were told the slaying occurred during a religious rite designed to prove power over death. Defense counsel said efforts would be made to prove the defendants insane.

Those named in the indictments, all relatives of the dead woman, were John J. Mills, Mrs. Alma Mills, Fred Mills, Mrs. Trixie Mills, Blaine McGinnis, Mrs. Mollie McGinnis, Mrs. Ora Moore, Tommy Boyd and Ballard Mills.

DEATH STILL LURKS IN KISS

CHICAGO, April 5.—(INS.)—The "kiss of death" may work its deadly influence upon Sol Feldman yet.

Feldman, 28, is one of the few—perhaps the only man—alive who has received the "kiss of death" from Mary Margaret Collins, and still lives. Mary kissed Jack Sheehy, Dean O'Banion, Irving Schlig, Johnny Phillips, Joe Bates, Sam Katz and "Red" McLaughlin and they are all dead.

Mary kissed Feldman one day as he lay near death in a hospital after being shot in a holdup. But today as Feldman was congratulating himself on escaping the "kiss of death," his wound opened again and friends fear for his life.

'Kept the Faith,' Hoover Says of Akron Crew

PALO ALTO, Cal., April 5.—(INS.)—Former President Herbert Hoover today extolled the bravery of the ill-fated Akron's crew.

"The Akron can be replaced, but we cannot replace the brave men who have been lost. Admiral Moffett and his men kept the faith and traditions of the Navy. They have gone down with their ship. They have added another inspiration to our people," Mr. Hoover said.

Mrs. Hoover christened the Akron August 8, 1931.

MORE VICTIMS OF CULT SEEN

MARTINEZ, Cal., April 5.—(AP.)—The possibility that several persons, including at least one white woman, had met death at the hands of a Filipino secret cult, was expressed today by authorities as they continued their investigation into the death of Mrs. Celine Novarro, 26.

Mrs. Novarro's body was found in a grave on an island in the San Joaquin River, about 40 miles from here.

District Attorney James F. Hoey announced Leon Kantinello, supposed leader of the cult, had confessed aiding in the burial alive of Mrs. Novarro because she allegedly was found unfaithful to her husband.

Interest immediately centered on the disappearance from Merced, Cal., last May of Mrs. Catalina Rondez, white wife of a Filipino ranch worker.

Hoey quoted Kantinello as saying unfaithfulness was the highest crime recognized by the court, known as the Caballeros de Dimas Alang. The alleged confession continued:

"But for the fact that Mrs. Novarro's companion in sin, a Turlock man, was unavailable, he undoubtedly would have shared the burial alive of Mrs. Novarro."

Hoey said he was informed there were branches of the cult in 16 American cities, including New York, Boston and Seattle.

'INSANE,' SAYS ACCUSED WIDOW

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., April 5.—(AP.)—Mrs. C. R. Frazier, 41, took the witness stand in Federal Court today to plead she temporarily was insane when she shot and killed Miss Manorna Murrell, 26-year-old secretary of her husband, former United States Narcotic Bureau chief here.

The frail mother of five sons was assisted to the stand to tell her story of the shooting, which occurred on the lawn of the post-office last December 16.

Mrs. Frazier contends she killed Miss Murrell, a divorcee, "because she tried to break up my home."

GIRL COLLAPSES AT HOUSE DOOR

When Paul Norton, answering a faint rap, opened the front door of his grandfather's home in Boston, Pa., last night, a young, attractive, well-dressed woman collapsed at his feet.

Norton and his grandfather, William Weddell, carried her into the house as she moaned:

"Why did I take it, why did I take it?"

But she was silent when asked her name.

At the McKeesport Hospital it was said there were indications she had swallowed poison. Her condition was reported as fair.

Today she said she was Dorothy O'Brien, of 1439 Ocean avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y. In her purse were several notebooks which listed addresses in Latrobe and Derry.

New French Envoy En Route to U. S.

PARIS, April 5.—(AP.)—Andre de la Boulaye, the new French ambassador to the United States, started today for Washington. The ambassador was accompanied by his wife and daughters, Marie Therese, 17, and Agnes, 13. They were sailing on the steamship Paris this afternoon for New York.

There are two other children in the family, Paul, a painter, and Francois.

YACHT IN RACE FIGHTS STORM

KEY WEST, Fla., April 5.—(AP.)—Her sails ripped to shreds by a gulf squall, the yacht Antonio, participant in the annual St. Petersburg-Havana sailing race, put into Key West harbor late yesterday with all hands safe aboard.

D. G. Houston, chief engineer, wired his wife in Miami that the Antonio had been buffeted by the storm with some damage to the craft, but that no members of the crew was injured.

LINER AGROUND, U. S. RUSHES AID

MIAMI, Fla., April 5.—(A.P.)—The Coast Guard cutter Unalga was dispatched from Fort Lauderdale today to the assistance of the Spanish liner Marquis de Camillas, aground off Carysfort Reef, south of here, with about 100 passengers aboard.

The vessel was reported in need of assistance today after declining proffered help when it first ran aground last night.

The Unalga was prepared to take off the passengers if the Marquis de Camillas could not be refloated.

A relief tug also was reported en route to the stranded vessel from Key West.

First word of the Marquis' grounding was received last night in a message from the tanker Algonquin, which reported the Marquis had refused assistance offered.

Messages, in Spanish, received from the Marquis' master today sent the relief expedition on its way.

Akron Crash Fails To End Germans' Faith in 'Zeps'

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, April 5.—(INS.)—Germany still retains her faith in lighted-than-air craft, and is proceeding with construction of a new Zeppelin expected to be completed by the spring of 1934.

Despite the British and American reaction to the disaster to the dirigible Akron, the worst tragedy in the history of aviation, this was indicated to International News Service today by officials of the world-famous Zeppelin works.

With construction work under way on the new German dirigible and the Graf Zeppelin in the process of overhauling in preparation for new ocean flights, the Zeppelin works are operating normally.

AKRON SAFETY STRESSED BY MOFFETT

Last Interview Given By Admiral Urged More Dirigibles

By LEIGH MATTESON
International News Service.
(Copyright, 1933, Universal Service, Inc.)

WASHINGTON, April 5.—"We need more dirigibles. I hope the President will include at least two more of them in his public works construction program. But the deep sea admirals in the Navy don't believe in them. They're suspicious. They have an idea they're not safe."

These words were spoken by Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of naval aeronautics, who perished in the Akron disaster, on the day before he left Washington for Lakehurst.

In his last interview, given exclusively to Universal Service, Admiral Moffett, with characteristic vigor and bluntness, told of his plans for development of America's air defense.

Unyielding in his belief in the power of lighter-than-aircraft, and convinced of the necessity for an adequate dirigible fleet, Admiral Moffett said:

"I would like to see the Navy build an airship of 8,000,000 cubic feet (gas capacity) and another of 10,000,000 feet. We could get such ships now for only about $2,000,000 apiece. The Akron cost us $5,000,000.

"And it would be a powerful and direct means of unemployment relief. Eighty-five per cent of the cost would go directly into labor. I wish I could get that idea across to Congress. I hope to get it across to Secretary Swanson and to the President.

"The big trouble is this: The old line officers are suspicious of airships. They don't understand them.

"The easiest way to handle an airship in times of heavy storms, for instance, is to take to the air, go high, and outride the storm. Hangars aren't used in everyday practice."

After the construction of the Akron, the question arose as to whether the government would exercise its option on the purchase of a sister ship—the Macon—at about $2,500,000, after paying $5,000,000 for the Akron. The Navy general board was opposed to it.

Air Supremacy of U. S. Periled by Akron Crash

WASHINGTON, April 5.—(AP.)—The fate of the boldest American bid for commercial supremacy in the air hung in the balance today as the nation took stock of the disaster that befell the sky queen Akron.

For just 18 months the giant craft was supreme as the largest, finest and most complete ship of its kind ever built. She represented the last word both in German Zeppelin building skill and adaptation of Yankee inventive genius to the science of aviation.

Even as she fell to her tragic end, however, her sister ship, the Macon, marking dirigible construction refinements born of the building and operating experiences with the Akron, awaited in her hangar the word that would launch her upon an initial trial voyage.

While these two ships were built and carried on a Navy basis as combat craft, a major purpose behind construction was exploration of the trans-oceanic commercial possibilities of these mighty liners of the air.

The loss of the Shenandoah in 1925 had prompted the Navy to increase markedly the strength requirements for airship design, and soon the Akron was in the air again.

A vital factor was that the United States, alone of all the nations building such aircraft, had helium gas with which to fill the great ship's cells, thus drastically reducing the danger of fire which had destroyed many dirigibles in other countries.

AKRON RESCUE STORY TOLD

SHIP SIGHTED

Then Irwin, nodding toward the north, says:

"Look!"

Deal looks.

Copeland can't look, he's unconscious.

Deal says:

"Lights."

Irwin asks:

"Man, can you pray?"

Deal cries:

"Good God, don't let them miss us."

The lights grow bigger, brighter, nearer, through the fog, over the waves that lift them up, and drops them down.

They say:

"A ship."

They grip their fingers tighter on the sleeve of Copeland, who cannot hope for himself.

RESCUE NEARS

A searchlight slices the night. It picks up their bobbing gas can. It centers there. Then there's the sound of hoarse shouting in cutteral German.

Then a hail. Weakly they call back.

Deal asks:

"Where's Irwin?"

"O. K., Buddy"

Deal asks:

"And Copeland?"

No answer now.

He repeats:

"And Copeland?"

Irwin answers:

"He died."

COMMANDER ALIVE

Deal Asks:

"Any others?"

Irwin answers:

"Lieut.-Com. Wiley."

Deal asks:

"Alive?"

Irwin says:

"O. K. He's in the skipper's cabin."

One of the German sailors brings a hot drink.

Irwin drinks.

The blankets are warm.

Sleep comes.

The story came out today, in the Naval Hospital, Brooklyn, as Lieut. Com. Wiley, Irwin and Deal were being taken to Washington, to testify before the inquiry into the Akron holocaust.

It didn't come direct. It couldn't. The two men were not allowed to see reporters.

FRIEND TELLS STORY

But it came from George Small, of Toms River, N. J. He, with the wife and father of Deal, were allowed to visit Deal for over an hour. Deal and Small and schoolmates together, in Pennsylvania.

Deal told Small all about it.

And Small came out, misty eyed, with Mrs. Deal and Deal's father. And later Small retold the story of the horror night, word for word, as Deal had told it to him.

While they stood outside the hospital the automobiles came to take Irwin and Deal away. Then it was that Deal's wife broke into tears.

Small said:

"Deal's got to fly to Washington. Do you wonder that she hates to think of his ever leaving the ground again?"

Suddenly those tears dried, her head came up—again she was the Navy wife.

"But he's got to go. Of course he's got to go. Orders are orders."

TOURIST CRUISE QUITS CHINA

TIENTSIN, China, April 5.—(AP.)—A group of tourists, many of them Americans, whom the Chinese government had refused permission to join their cruise ship at Chinwangtao, sailed from Taku for Japan today.

Recent hostilities between Japanese and Chinese north of Chinwangtao were cited by authorities as the reason why the 189 travelers should not proceed by train to Chinwangtao, where their cruise ship, the Resolute, arrived on April 1 from Shanghai.

The tourists had gone to Peiping and Tientsin. Cruise officials ordered the Resolute to proceed to Taku where they picked up the tourists.

400 PICKETING SHIRT FACTORY

UNIONTOWN, Pa., April 5.—The 400-odd girls striking against a wage cut at the Berkowitz shirt factory here gathered peacefully today to picket against strike-breakers.

Both the management of the factory and the girls, led by the young and pretty Edna Forman, denied nearing a settlement agreement.

A meeting of both sides with Charles C. Chizzoni, Labor and Industry Department mediator, has been set for tomorrow, however, and may effect a settlement.

Japanese Diplomat Visits With Fords

DETROIT, April 5.—(AP.)—Describing himself as an industrialist, and not a diplomatic representative for the Japanese government, Yosuke Matsuoka lunched with Henry and Edsel Ford yesterday at the Ford Motor Company plant, disclaiming any official significance for his visit here.

RAIL CONTROL CHANGES O.K.'D

WASHINGTON, April 5.—(INS.)—Two administration bills, proposing reforms in government control of railroads, were approved today by Interstate Commerce Commissioner Joseph B. Eastman at a hearing of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee.

One bill would repeal the recapture clause of existing law. The other would give the comission authority to supervise all railroad holding companies and prohibit the creation of such companies in the future without the commission's consent.

Eastman rather startled the committee by declaring there had been a "20 per cent reduction in total earnings of railroads in 1932 as compared with 1931."

He added that there had been a "quite substantial decline in revenues this year as compared with last year."

DO HEADACHES DRIVE YOU CRAZY?

It's the worst kind of folly to dope and drug yourself every time you have one of those blinding, throbbing headaches. For drugs only relieve the pain for the moment, and in a little while the headache returns worse than ever and you have to drug yourself all over again. You've got to get at the cause.

Poisons created in your own body cause these severe headaches, and you must remove the poisons to get relief of a lasting nature.

By starting the new harmless Cream of Nujol treatment, today, you may free yourself from this constant torment.

This new form of Nujol is specially designed to rid you of poisons which very often cause this condition.

Cream of Nujol contains no drugs, and does not in any way interfere with work or play. It is delicious to take. Moreover, you can use this modern treatment at a cost of but a few cents a day.

Take Cream of Nujol night and morning. Begin this very night and give it a real trial. Buy it at any drug counter.

SEEK TO FREE INTEREST CASH

At the request of Allegheny County officials, United States Senator David A. Reed is attempting to have the emergency banking law amended so that municipalities having funds on deposit in banks operating under conservators can pay out money due on maturing bonds or coupons. This amendment would enable such payments to be made and keep the municipality from having its credit endangered.

During the bank holiday some weeks ago the local officials wired Reed with their request. He notified them that under the present emergency law it would be impossible to make a municipality a preferred creditor. He stated in a telegram received yesterday that the amendment, now being drafted, had been given favorable consideration by government officials.

SEEKING AKRON CRASH CAUSE

day the Akron was about 1,000 feet up, proceeding steadily, and apparently in no trouble despite severe lightning, thunder and rain.

No wireless message was received from the Akron and so the Algonquin continued to New York, not learning of the crash until hours after it happened.

Special oHuse Committee Urged for Inquiry

WASHINGTON, April 5.—(AP.)—Investigation of the Akron disaster by a special committee was proposed in the House today by Representative McClintic (Dem.), of Oklahoma.

The resolution for the investigation was read to the House at McClintic's request.

The committee would be directed to report on the cause of the Akron crash and "the desirability of additional ships of this type."

McClintic asked for a committee of seven Representatives "not directly interested in either the Army or Navy." He said that members of the House committees dealing with the Army and Navy "were more or less under the influence of the department having jurisdiction."

Chairman Vinson earlier today designated a House naval subcommittee to begin an investigation early next week.

The committee will decide Friday when to begin the study, what witnesses to hear and whether to hold hearings at Lakehurst, N. J., from which the Akron started its last flight.

Vinson named Representative Delaney (Dem.), of New York, as chairman of the sub-committee.

After being selected to head the sub-committee, Delaney said to newspapermen:

"All statements given out previously in the last 24 hours, saying this accident is the death knell of the dirigible, in my opinion are a little hysterical. It is too early to decide.

"I still thoroughly believe the dirigible is not a dead issue. One accident doesn't mean we should discontinue or condemn the dirigible at all."

Meanwhile, in the Senate a resolution calling for a Senatorial inquiry into the wreck of the Akron was introduced by Senator King (Dem.), of Utah, and referred to the Naval Affairs Committee with a request from King that consideration be expedited.

A full investigation into other airship wrecks and the utility of such ircraft was called for by the resolution. It would set up a committee of five Senators to look into the questions.

Responsibility for the aerial tragedies would be fixed, if possible, and the committee would be required to report to the Senate as soon as practicable.

PENSION FUND BILL PASSED AFTER ROW

HARRISBURG, April 5.—(AP.)—In another flare up of the Allegheny County political dispute the Senate today passed, 36 to 10, the Coyne bill, permitting Allegheny county to appropriate money to the county employes' retirement fund. The measure goes to the House.

Senator William D. Mansfield attacked the proposal and sought to amend it. He charged the present county fund is insolvent. Senator Frank J. Harris, essaying the role of mediator, suggested changes to limit the county payments to $120,000 to $130,000 a year.

FUND ATTACKED

Mansfield asked the Senate to defer action on the bill. He said:

"I have opposed Senator Coyne here so much that I know what I say will have no effect on you. But, you ought to know the effect of what you do on the taxpayers."

He said he wanted a sound and workable pension fund for the county, asserting the present fund is in an "insolvent condition." He said the "insolvent" condition exists because the present fund is not on an acturial basis.

He said the employes paid in $587,242 to the fund and the county paid $768,685.

Mansfield said that four employes drew $12,450, $14,750, $15,582 and $20,100 from the fund and paid in respectively only $55, $87, $41 and $27.

HARRIS ASKS LIMIT

Senator Harris, Allegheny, said he would vote for the bill if amended to limit the county's pension payments to $120,000 or $130,000 a year.

Senator Coyne said "the former Chief Justice of the State Supreme Court" paid only a small sum to the state pension fund and "now draws a pension of $10,000 a year."

He asked why, if this applied to judges, County employes should not receive similar treatment.

Mansfield said he objected to "passing the buck" from one body to another, urging that the Senate draft a proper bill and send it to the House or defeat it. His motion to defer action was defeated, 14 to 33.

Mansfield said he is interested "in straightening out the finances of Allegheny County."

Senator Harris, acting as peacemaker in the controversy, asked that the three words "Shall be solvent" be stricken from the bill, saying he would then vote for it. He asked that action on the bill be deferred until tomorrow.

Senator Coyne objected to deferring action.

Senator Morris Einstein, Allegheny, said the bill was reported for passage by an almost unanimous vote in the new County and County Seats Committee.

He said that if the committee had been told that the bill would require $5,000,000 from the county it would never have been reported for passage. He suggested it be sent to the House and be amended there.

Senator Harris said there was an "understanding" among the Allegheny Senators and not the committe on the limitation of payments by the county to the pension fund.

Horse Racing Bill Passes House Test

HARRISBURG, April 5.—(INS.)—The House today passed on first reading the Baldi-Peters bill legalizing horse racing in Pennsylvania and permitting the operation of pari-mutuel machines.

The measure provides for a license fee of $5,000 a day for racing. Five per cent of the money bet or wagered through the pari-mutuel machines would be returned to the state for the mothers' assistance fund.

BARTER GROUP DENIES BEGGING

A $5 reward in bartercraft "credits" has been offered by the Guyasuta Bartercraft Association for information leading to arrest and conviction of persons fraudulently soliciting contributions in the Guyasuta Sharpsburg-Etna district.

Residents report they have been solicited over the telephone. When they agreed to make a contribution unidentified persons called. According to Edgar E. Brosius, president, no one has been given authority to seek contributions yet.

Later on, he says, the association may solicit funds, but solicitors will be furnished identification.

The wood-cutting unit of the association is at work in a 90-acre tract of woodland converting all dead trees into cordwood. At the store, the soap-making groups, and the dress and clothes-repairing units are at work. The association hopes to make its members self-supporting without money. Food, clothing, furniture, and all kinds of products will be bartered.

R. F. C. TO HEAR STATE RELIEF LOAN NEEDS

HARRISBURG, April 5. — A delegation representing the Legislature and the State Emergency Relief Board will go to Washington tomorrow to confer with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation on further federal relief loans for Pennsylvania. Loans for April and May will be discussed.

The state's relief program for the two-year period beginning June 1 was halted temporarily today when the Talbot bill appropriating $20,000,000 was sent back to the Senate Appropriations Committee.

In its present form, the Talbot bill would abolish county relief boards. Gov. Pinchot opposes such a provision and also has declared he will veto any appropriation that makes no provision for acquiring funds. The Talbot bill supporters are hopeful of obtaining funds to finance the relief appropriations from governmental economies.

Gov. Pinchot said all members of the relief board and 10 or 12 legislators will go to the conference with R. F. C. officials scheduled for 4 p. m. tomorrow.

Monday the R. F. C. wired Pinchot that no action will be taken on Pennsylvania's applications for Federal aid for April and May until the Governor, the Relief Board and a representative delegation of the Legislature confers in Washington with the Corporation.

Reapportionment Bill to House Floor

HARRISBURG, April 5.—The bill of Representative Brown, Allegheny, to reapportion the legislative districts was reported from the House Legislative Apportionment Committee today. It will be on tomorrow's first reading calendar.

Under the bill Philadelphia and Dauphin Counties would lose one member each while Allegheny, Delaware and Luzerne counties would gain members. The House membership would be increased from 208 to 209.

PINCHOT FLAYS 'BLIND' HOUSE

HARRISBURG, April 5.—(AP.)—In a new attack upon the Legislature, Gov. Pinchot asserts that in 14 weeks it has not enacted "a single bill of major importance." The trouble, he said, is lack of leadership, adding:

"Strong leadership could have led the House of Representatives successfully, as a wise dog leads a blind man across the street. But this seems to be the case of the blind man trying to lead the dog."

He again attacked beer legislation proposed in the House and accused beer lobbies of being behind the Sowers-Conner bill to control the sale of beer.

Commenting on the Nazi anti-Jewish campaign in Germany, the Governor said in his opinion it was organized "by the reactionary German leaders in order to divert the minds of the people from the economic degradation."

SEEK UNIFORM ELECTION BILLS

HARRISBURG, April 5.—Senate and House subcommittees today were working on a program of election laws to submit to the Legislature. The joint effort is an attempt to avoid confusion and not clutter the calendars of both House and Senate with similar bills.

Action of the subcommittees is directed principally toward an election program introduced by Senator William D. Mansfield, which was the subject of a hearing yesterday before the Senate Elections Committee.

One bill would give the county Elections Bureau or the courts automatic authority to open ballot boxes where the number of votes cast is larger than the number of registrants in a district.

Another perfects the law pertaining to the use of voting machines, and two others would result in economies in the printing attendant upon an election.

Speedier returns of ballot boxes in a primary election also is ordered in one bill.

Another would fix a minimum fee of $500 for any group filing candidates on "Mushroom" party labels, to discourage nuisance entries in an election.

Permanent registration is to be discussed by the Senate committee later. Next week final action will be taken on the Pittsburgh city manager bill, the emergence of which from committee is doubtful.

Legislative Recess Proposed in House

HARRISBURG, April 5.—Representative Sowers, Philadelphia, offered a resolution in the House today calling for a legislative recess from next week until May 9. No action was taken on the resolution.

Sowers' resolution said the recess was needed to permit members to study the mass of bills now pending on the calendar.

ECONOMY VOTED IN 2ND FIGHT WITH PINCHOT

HARRISBURG, April 5.—In a second catch-as-catch can battle, the Republican state organization out-wrestled Gov. Pinchot and has sent the Turner economy bill to the Senate, where it is to be fought out in a hope of passage.

Its sponsor, Representative Ellwood J. Turner, Delaware County, claims it will cut about $1,000,000 from state costs, but Gov. Pinchot today said its economies will not exceed $700,000.

The Governor charged the Republican organization won its victory in the House, which passed the Turner bill yesterday, by threatening to cut appropriations to hospitals. He said:

"I have never seen anything like the pressure the organization used to pass the Turner bill."

The House followed its action today by re-passing another Turner measure which opponents charge was "railroaded" past inattentive members. This bill transfers to the Auditor General's Department auditing powers held by the Revenue Department.

The Governor intends to veto the Turner economy bill, but the Legislature may hold it until just before adjournment, lay it on his desk, and quit before he acts. Then, if he vetoes the measure and uses its failure as the basis for an extra session call the organization will try to place the burden of the extra meeting on Mr. Pinchot.

The organization victory, in which 105 votes were mustered, relieved a defeat early Tuesday. The reversal was achieved by strenuous prodding, met by equally strenuous pressure from the Governor.

There was the play of politics all over the lot. The organization viewed its 105 votes, only one more than a constitutional majority, as a great victory, which is an index of the organization strength against the Pinchot-Democratic combination.

On the second vote the Allegheny County line remained as in the first test, 16 to 11 for the Turner bill.

PENSION BILLS GO TO SENATE

HARRISBURG, April 5.—(AP.)—Complete power to let the voters decide whether old age pensions shall be legal in Pennsylvania rests with the Senate today.

The House last night voted overwhelmingly to submit the question to the electorate, following the example of the 1931 Legislature.

It approved, 180 to 12, the Sowers resolution proposing an amendment to permit state contributions to pensions. It indorsed, 181 to 10, a similar proposal covering county payments.

Turning to the Senate, pension supporters are stressing the need for action this session. If that branch approves the amendment, the question goes to the voters in November. If it kills the proposal, the matter cannot be submitted before 1938.

An Easter Coat Sale

A sale in the best Horne manner . . . the foremost of the spring coat fashions, both furred and unfurred . . . regular stock qualities at lower prices.

Fur Trimmings to Broaden Shoulders

Shoulders must look broad, this spring, to make waists and hips appear slimmer, and these coats achieve the trick by the smartest means: Drop-shoulder capes bordered with wolf or monkey or banded with galyak, epaulets of ermine, wide revers of Russian lamb, set-back collars of fox and galyak. . . . Fur-trimmed coats are included at each price.

Unfurred Coats in the Latest Versions

Out of the Paris openings, and reproduced and adapted for this collection, are Schiaparelli's Band Master Coat, her Tray-Shoulder Coat, the modified Reefer Coat, Lanvin's Scarf Coat, "young" Triple-Cape Coats, coats with interesting sleeves, and models with flattering scarfs that take the place of fur.

The Superior Fabrics

This season's weaves of the famous Forstmann line (America's finest woolens), the very ones found in the highest priced coats this spring, are in models at both sale prices. In the new, hazy gray, beige and blue shades, besides black and dark blues.

All Sizes for Women and Misses

Women's regular sizes 34 to 44; Short Women's half sizes 33½ to 45½; Misses' sizes 12 to 20.

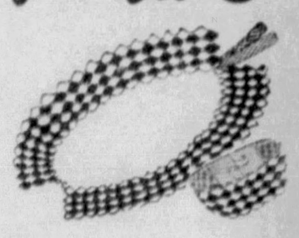
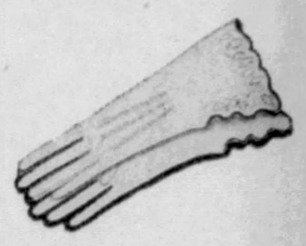
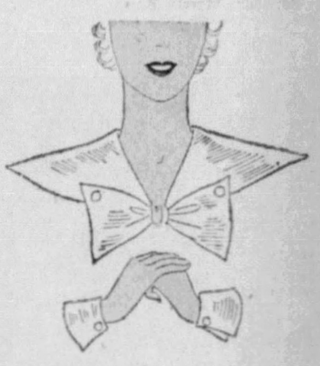
The Easter Parade!



A New Collar-Necklace of enameled mesh (made by Whiting-Davis, those masters of metal mesh artistry!) is not only a clever bit of colorful jewelry, but a distinctive finish for the neckline of your frock! More than an inch and a half wide—in pastels or white-and-color combinations—and priced just $1.00. Cuff-Bracelets to match, $1.00.



IMPORTED Kid Gloves—as soft and supple as satin—are styled with the loveliest scalloped and perforated tops that give a touch of charm to their fine simplicity. Their pique-sewn fingers make them fit beautifully . . . and the colors harmonize with everything. Black, black-with-white, beige, beige-with-brown, gray. $3.00.



RIPPLE Sheer is a stunning new corded-looking silk that makes the newest of new neckwear! There's a dashing, wide-revers collar that ends in a bow . . . and a fascinating new ascot effect, bounded on all sides by a crisp organdie ruffle. Best of all, they're washable! $2.00.

SILK Handbags have a very special charm of their own . . . whether they're trim, tailored affairs or more elaborate afternoon types . . . that wins them a place with the smartest of Easter fashions! New metal frames with mysterious fastenings—graceful envelopes and pouches—of silk crepe, corded silks, matelasse, etc. . . . all elegantly lined and finished. Black, navy, brown, $3.00.

PROPPER Ingrain Chiffon Stockings just naturally belong with your Easter finery! Exquisitely sheer and flattering, perfect-fitting, and created in the shades that harmonize most subtly with the smartest of Easter costumes.

School Situation Luncheon Topic

The school situation will be discussed by Charles H. Lehmann tomorrow noon at the Lions' Club luncheon in the Nixon Restaurant.

GROSS ESTATE BATTLE SEEN

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla., April 5.—(AP.)—Coroner Hugh Lester revealed here that autopsies were performed last week on the bodies of Capt. Christian Channing Gross and his two children, killed in an automobile accident here March 26.

Attorneys interested in the case said the autopsies were performed to determine if either of Capt. Gross' children lived longer than he did. The autopsy reports were not made public.

A trust fund of $850,000 was established several years ago by Capt. Gross for his children. Attorneys said if he survived both of the children, Peter and Barbara, the trust fund would go to his father, Charles W. Gross, of Chicago. If either child survived him, however, the divorced wife of Capt. Gross, who now is remarried and living in Paris, would inherit the fund, it was said.

Capt. Gross' mother, Mrs. Natall Gross, also was killed in the accident. Charles W. Gross was injured critically and still is in a hospital here.

Randolph Named One of House Whips

WASHINGTON, April 5.—(AP.)—Representative Randolph (Dem.), of Elkins, W. Va., has been named one of the 15 assistant Democratic whips of the House.

Randolph, as assistant whip for the division made up of Democratic Representatives from West Virginia and Ohio, will have a role somewhat like that of a monitor—keeping his colleagues informed on what the Democratic policies will be and seeing they are present to vote.

French Envoy's Son To Wed in N. Y.

Carter, of New York, appeared at the marriage license bureau yesterday and said they would be married on April 8 at St. Jean Baptiste Church. Claudel said he was born 24 years ago in Tien Tsin, China. Miss Cartier said she was 21.

Economy Dims Crafton's Lights

Joining other communities in an economy program, Crafton Borough Council at its meeting held last night ordered the reduction of candle power for its street lights, saving approximately $1,000 a year. The garbage removal contract was awarded to Dash Brothers, Wilkinsburg, the lowest bidder, at a saving of $3,900 from last year's contract. The latter takes effect May 15. President of Council W. S. Guy presided.

2,000 EXPECTED AT TEACHERS' CONFERENCE

With public education believed by many authorities to be at a crisis in its progress, more than usual interest has been reported in the Western Pennsylvania Education Conference to be held here for three days beginning tomorrow.

Approximately 12,000 educators will be represented at the conference which is a combined meeting of the Pittsburgh Teachers Institute, the Western Convention District, Pennsylvania State Education Association, and the School of Education Conference.

Every phase of education from school legislation at Harrisburg to what the pupil thinks about his teacher will be considered by the 2,000 teachers expected to attend the conference.

GRAHAM PRESIDES

A dinner in the ballroom of the Hotel Schenley will climax tomorrow's sessions, when Dr. Ben G. Graham, superintendent of Pittsburgh public schools, will preside as toastmaster at a Parents' Institute. Eduard C. Lindeman, consultant for the National Council of Parent Education, will be the speaker.

Opening sessions will be held in Hotel Schenley at 10:30 a. m. with most of the day given over to discussion of the relations between parent, teacher anr child. Mrs. Saul Levine, chairman of the Pittsburgh Council of Parent Education, will preside at the opening meeting.

NOTED PRINTS TO BE SHOWN

Many of the most notable prints in the history of the art are included in the exhibition which opens in Carnegie Institute tomorrow. The exhibit consists of 240 prints from the collection of Lessing J. Rosenwald, of Philadelphia.

It will be installed on the balcony of Sculpture Hall and in the four galleries on the second floor of the institute and will continue through May 21.

DENMARK WINS 'RED ERIC'S' LAND

THE HAGUE, Holland, April 5.—(AP.)—Denmark's title to Eastern Greenland was confirmed today by a decision of the Permanent Court of International Justice in her favor in a dispute with Norway over its ownership.

The Norwegians conceded Danish sovereignity over the remainder of Greenland, but contended that Norway was entitled to a portion of Eastern Greenland.

A Norwegian expedition had landed there in 1931 and it was claimed Denmark never confirmed her ownership by colonizing the territory.

Norway's claim was to the "Eric the Red" Land, the historical basis of which goes back to the almost prehistoric time of Eric the Red, for which the territory was named.

Denmark, however, disputed the claim, declaring Norway broke the continuity of occupation in the Thirteenth Century when Norwegian ships failed to call with food and the budding colony starved.

3,000 FED DAILY IN BREADLINE

Three thousand free meals every day—nearly 100,000 every month. An average of 3,000 men and boys waiting in the bread line at Old St. Patrick's, day in and day out—hungry and destitute through no fault of their own. The great majority of them are shabby and far from adequately clothed. In some instances bare feet protrude from the makeshift shoes.

They are fed standing at four large tables in the basement of the church—tables, immaculately clean, 200 at a time. The cripples are given chairs. Monday they had beef stew—yesterday baked beans with plenty of bread. When they take their places at the tables they find a liberal meal, steaming hot, in front of them. If they want a second helping they step out and get into the line again. They are welcome to more, but to expedite the feeding of 3,000 the units of 200 must move in a body.

These are some of the reasons why Father Cox urgently needs financial support and these reasons represent only one angle of the many relief activities conducted at Old St. Patrick's. These are also some of the reasons why the Sun-Telegraph today prints its one hundred and fiftieth consecutive daily story about the splendid work of the real "father of the jobless."

Father Cox is getting better and better results every day in his drive for subscriptions for this newspaper. Every subscription that comes in on the blank on this page or is telephoned in with the request that Father Cox be given credit for it, brings to his unemployment relief fund a liberal cash commission.

WIFE SHOT HIM, TOM MIX TESTIFIES

LOS ANGELES, April 5.—(AP.)—Tom Mix, actor, charges that Mrs. Victoria Forde de Olzaal, his former wife, wounded him in the arm during marital difficulties which preceded her post-marital suit against him to collect $50,000 on five notes.

At the time of the shooting, which he said occurred in March, 1924, Mix indicated he accidentally wounded himself.

He testified yesterday:

"I had been down on Main street jumping out of a window onto a girder for a film that was coming out. I had a picture of it and brought it home.

"One of those gigolos, some friend of the family, picked up this picture and said, 'If I were you, Mrs. Mix, I would have my husband's head examined.' I didn't like the remark, so I threw him out."

This angered Mrs. Mix, he said, and she shot at him five times, one bullet striking him in one arm and passing through his shoulder.

The notes were given by Mix in a property deal with his former wife, now married to the Argentine consul at San Francisco.

U. S. ARTIST GAS SUICIDE IN PARIS

PARIS, April 5.—(INS.)—Leaving a warning lest anyone enter carrying a lighted cigaret or matches, Charles Gatchell, 45-year-old American artist and husband of Fannie Kilbourne, noted novelist, committed suicide by gas in a rented studio in the Montparnasse quarter of Paris today.

His body was found on the kitchen floor of a studio at 11 Rue Schoelcher, according to police, who said gas was escaping from the stove.

Before ending his life, Gatchell, who was born in Benton Harbor, Mich., penned a note to the concierge, which was mailed last night and received early this morning. It was immediately handed to police who revealed its contents as follows:

"I am committing suicide by gas in the studio of Mlle. Kretzinger. Be careful. Don't enter with a lighted cigaret or matches. Gas. A. M. Minifree, 39 Rue Dabeiete, will pay you for my telephone calls and my laundry, which will be delivered Monday as usual. Call the police at 9."

RUSS, HANNAH LINGER IN RENO

RENO, Nev., April 5.—(AP.)—Hannah Williams, Broadway stage star, lingered in Reno after obtaining a divorce, and spent hours riding horseback along desert trails with Russ Columbo, dance band leader and crooner, with whom she has been linked in a romance she says does not exist.

Divorced yesterday from Roger Wolff Kahn, son of Otto Kahn, New York banker, Miss Williams announced she intends to start "straight back to New York" tonight.

"I wanted a home of our own, but Roger insisted that we live with his parents."

What's the Value of a TRADE-MARK?

TODAY the Chesterfield trade-mark is very valuable. Back of it is the good will of thousands—perhaps hundreds of thousands—of smokers.

Chesterfield cigarettes were first manufactured more than twenty-five years ago. At the start, they were sold at a loss, but the quantity sold increased steadily from year to year, until now Chesterfields are sold in great volume at a very small percentage of profit.

The Chesterfield trade-mark, as indicated above, is registered in the United States Patent Office. This means that the United States Government says that only Chesterfield may use this trade-mark for cigarettes.

This is not only for our protection, but for yours as well, because what the Chesterfield trade-mark really means is that you and all Chesterfield smokers will get Chesterfields manufactured under the same formula, by the same people, and in all respects absolutely the same, in every package you buy, year in and year out.

Wherever you buy them, in this or in any other country, you can depend upon the Chesterfield trade-mark.

$270,000 DRIVE SAVES 'MET'

NEW YORK, April 5.—(AP.)—The New York Times says the Metropolitan Opera Company has raised $270,000 of the $300,000 needed to insure its continuance next year and is already making plans for a 14-week season to open December 25 or 26.

The fund raising committee, headed by Lucrezia Bori, hopes the remaining $30,000 will be raised through a ball scheduled for April 28. Signing of contracts and definite decisions on the repertoire will not be made until the $300,000 is obtained.

The New York Times says, however, that present plans call for at least three imporiant novelties—"Merry Mount," by Richard L. Stokes and Howard Hanson, probably starring Lawrence Tibbett; Donizetti's "Linda di Chamounix," with Lily Pons, and Richard Strauss' "Salome."

The last named was termed "objectionable and detrimental" by directors of the Metropolitan after its first presentation in 1906. Oscar Hammerstein presented it with Mary Garden in 1910, but it has not been seen here since then.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Self-Medication Often Unwise and Dangerous

Not long ago, the sudden death of an outstanding figure shocked the entire nation. Newspaper accounts referred to the cause of death as "acute indigestion." It had not been uncommon for him to suffer from so-called indigestion. For the relief of these attacks bicarbonate of soda was taken.

Dr. Copeland

It is a common practice to depend on soda and to neglect finding out what is wrong. Too often indigestion is not due to a stomach ailment. Sometimes it can be traced to a form of heart disease, known as "coronary disease."

I need not tell you, of course, that not all cases of indigestion are due to heart disease. But under no circumstances is it advisable to take medicine without the consent and supervision of a physician. He and only he is qualified to determine what your ailment really is and what medicine is indicated.

We often hear individuals boast of never having been to a doctor. Yet they complain of indigestion and seek relief from discomfort by self-medication. I cannot overemphasize the danger of doing this. I hope you will not look upon indigestion as merely a mild discomfort. It is not a disease, in and of itself, but it may be a symptom or sign of some real disturbance of the body.

Persistent indigestion may be due to faulty eating habits, to improper diet, or to emotional excitement, such as fear or worry. It may be traced to an oversecretion of the juices of the stomach. This is easily controlled by following a proper diet.

Fried and greasy foods, salts, peppers, spices and condiments should be omitted from the diet of the sufferer from indigestion. Chew your food slowly and carefully. Never gulp your food. It is best to leave the table feeling a bit hungry rather than to have the sensation of being overstuffed.

When indigestion persists in spite of correction of the diet and improved habits of eating, a physical examination by a physician is recommended. In this examination X-ray pictures of the stomach and intestines should be taken. Various tests to determine the working of the stomach are advised.

If the stomach and intestines are found to be normal, other sources of irritation must be looked for, to determine the underlying cause of the indigestion. A diseased gall bladder or appendix is often the cause of the upset. When the diseased organ is removed, all signs of indigestion disappear.

If the alimentary canal is normal, the heart must not be overlooked as the seat of the trouble which produces the symtoms of indigestion. This disturbance is of particular significance in individuals beyond 50 years of age.

Coronary disease is an affliction of the blood vessels of the heart. Its only symptom may be mild discomfort in the region of the heart, together with indigestion. The disease is fatal when neglected.

Let me warn you against the dangers associated with persistent indigestion. Do not neglect this condition, but make sure with your physician. He has been trained in his work and can advise you. Avoid depending on self medication with all its dangers.

Man About Town

Add Sad Endings: Jesse Livermore, the Wall Streeter, who lost too much money in the crash, and who married that Omaha gold mine (after a six-weeks romance), never even paused to say "ta-ta" to Lucille Ballantine, the dancer—his heart for years . . . "Maybe it's because I loved you too muhhhh-tch—Mebbe that is why you loved me so lit-tul!"

If the persistent groom of Boots Mallory, the Fox starlet, gives in—she will middle-aisle it with Winnie Sheehan, the Fox exec.

Jean Harlow is having herself a time—trying to keep an important movie chump and a producer, on the same lot, from clashing.

When the very clever Peggy Fears tells reporters that she wants "to reconcile" with her husband but "she can't find him because he is always out with other women"—she makes my chapped lips bleed . . . What Peg-o'-My-Eye! is demanding, besides the divorce, is a mere $1,000 every week for the next 15 years, which is why "Bluemee" is hiding in a thimble.

Police Commissioner Mulrooney will positively resign during the week to be appointed New York's Beer Commissioner.

They call Ben Bernie "The Old Mice-tro"—Mice, we presume, for short . . . Anna Q. Nilssen, the screen pretender, and Colin Craig, her "heavy" in the coastal "Hedda Gabler," are too torrid. . . . Barbara Sheldon, a pretty thing, is Hollywood-bound again. George Frank, who is James Cagney's governor, may marry her—if she doesn't believe everything that Nat Pendleton coos . . . Janet Gaynor, who "went Kanaka" on the beach at Waikiki—drew the stares of the white population there.

Cabaret impressarios are worrying how they can make a profit when beer comes back. With the low tariff and percentage—they would sooner peddle ginger ale and White Rock at $1 the bottle.

For them it won't be April Seventh Heaven.

Lovely of Mr. Holde of "Music in the Air" to let out two girls who opened with the show, and then offer only one week's wages—which is swell for Equity to legitimately yell about, the chump . . . Kathleen Van Noy of "Gay Divorce" and Cadet Luttrell of West Point have picked the ring and will be welded in June.

The Al Wertheims of 480 Park avenue have agreed to part. She will dwell in Paris . . . Mrs. Frances Madura of 20 East 76th street, New York, will tell it to a Hot Springs judge . . . Add grand suggestions from Sarah Padden, the actress: "We have a Mother's Day—a Father's Day and so forth. Why not a President's Day? In gratitude for what President Roosevelt has done for the country. A glorious tribute would be for the whole country to go to Church on the Sabbath following Easter!"

Jimmy Walker won his case against that San Francisco hotel which tried to sue him for his suite rent when defending Mooney out there.

Jimmy offered to pay his own bills—not those of his kibitzers—and so they sued him. Judge Lippe of here chucked it out.

A scallion to those sappy Philadelphians who, during the Eddie Lang funeral—applauded everytime they saw a celebrity enter the funeral service. They stormed the Bing Crosbys and other stars and giggled and demanded autographs. Of all things! . . . Scallions to the promoters of the new number racket, "which cannot be won!" . . . Scallions to Variety's boxscorer on the dramatic critics—for crediting us with a "no opinion" (the first in our career) on the play "Pigeons and People," the headline over that review plainly reading: "George M. Cohan Triumphs in New Hit!" . . . Oh, Sime! I think the staff needs a rehearsal . . . An orchid to Betty Compton (Jimmy's girl), who will turn over all the royalties on her book to various charities . . . She's writing the tome just to get over "her side of the thing" . . . Clara Whalen Gray of the Whalen Cigar tribe and her song-writing groom are trying to make up their minds.

Mike Romanoff went to see "Take a Chance" and sort of "went for" one of the cuties in the chorus. He scribbled a note on his program and sent it to her. "I think," he scribbled, "that you are the best bet in the show!" . . . To which she replied: "Thanks. I think you are crazy!"

Champagne before prohibition cost $31 a case. Now the tax alone will be $20.52. Locals will peddle it for $7 the bottle.

Observed on three West 48th Street playhouses: "Saturday Night"—"One Sunday Afternoon"—"The Party's Over."

Junie, put that new Ruth Etting version of "You've Got Me Cryin' Again" on, again—and know how much I miss you.

Mexico City might be interested to know that one of its better physicians, Dr. I. Milan, is bringing home an American bride, 23-year-old Verna Carleton, who used to be on The World . . . Buddy (of B. and Vilma Ebsen, who dance too good) sings "The St. Looey Blooz" gooder . . . Landlords now are putting over a fast one. Leases now state that rent is payable in "gold dollars of present weight and fineness" and not in "lawful money of the U. S." heretofore. So if we have the slightest bit of inflation the tenant will be John Chump again.

The Paramount Theater, New York, is advertising the current show as "Crazy Week" and J. M. Josefsberg says that too many people are under the impression that it's a return engagement for Ben Bernie!

Why we have that far away look in our eyes: We recently were asked to recommend a press agent for a fancy job at fancy wages. We recommended an unemployed stranger. His new tome just came out and pages are devoted to a series of nasties.

The only trouble with those opening nights in the cabarets where the celebs and the smellebs gather (so they can take bows) is that you have to applaud the other fellow.

Freddie Ziegler, who was melted last year, was secretly married last week to a lass last-tagged Hughes, who has too much money.

I trust that all of you know by now that President Roosevelt will never be under anybody's thumb—until he is on a postage stamp!

Theft Policy Higher for Stars

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1933, King Features Synd., Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., April 5.—Everything comes higher to motion pictures stars—even some forms of insurance.

When Marlene Dietrich or Lilian Harvey or Gloria Swanson want to take out burglary insurance on their jewelry or furs, they have to pay a much higher rate than the ordinary woman.

The reason is they are natural targets for the thief. One has only to cite such instances as the recent Hollywood jewelry robberies of Mae West, Betty Compson and the Zeppo Marxes to realize the truth of this.

Oddly enough, directors or writers pay the same rate as anyone else. Insurance companies figure they are only normal risks.

Miss Compson

Another matter which is giving the insurance companies concern is the large number of accident liability suits filed against the film people. Juries are too prone to award damages when the defendant is a motion picture person, supposedly earning a high salary. Meaning no reflection against the actors themselves, one company has refused to write any more liability insurance for film stars.

They are getting a chuckle out of Lee Tracy's crack upon visiting the frozen north set where W. S. Van Dyke is filming "Eskimo." Inside an igloo (the real ones are made of ice), the Eskimo family were going to bed. Suddenly the baby began to cry.

Lee exclaimed: "I'd hate to be a papa in Alaska. Imagine walking the floor all night with the baby."

Only a short time has passed since Kenneth MacKenna returned from the East, but he has found himself a job—or rather Agents Edington and Vincent have found it. Anyway, Ken goes into the lead in "Cocktail Hour," Columbia's big picture in which Bebe Daniels has the cheif feminine role. Victor Schertzinger directs.

The friendship of Billie Dove and tall Bob Kenniston continues, they were dancing the other night to Jay Whidden's music at the Roosevelt Blossom room. Dorothy Jordan was there with Merian C. Cooper, too.

Doctors have ordered Marlene Deitrich to stay in bed for several days yet. If she can finish "Song of Songs" the star plans to sail for Germany on the Bremen, April 23. She still declines to discuss her future plans . . . Ted Eshbaugh has finished the first of the "Wizard of Oz" color cartoons . . . Howard Hughes, who is fast becoming Hollywood's boy friend, was dancing at the Cocoanut Grove the other evening with Benita Hume . . . Sally Eilers and Hoot Gibson were there, too . . . Al Boasberg, newly arrived from the East, says he has come out here to handle iodine for the cuts.

John Barrymore and Katharine Hepburn will co-star in G. B. Stern's new novel, "Long Lost Father," which is not yet off the press. RKO negotiated for it after a perusal of the galley proofs. It proved exactly the type of story for which the producers were searching for the Barrymore-Hepburn co-starring plan.

In "A Bill of Divorcement," which introduced Miss Hepburn to the screen, she played the role of Barrymore's daughter. In "Long Lost Father" the two will again have the same relationship of father and daughter.

Phrenological Device Variety Feature

In the foyer of the Variety this week is a device called the psycograph, a gadget that adjusts itself to the contour of the head and registers the prominence of the "bumps," as rated by the phrenological standard, and automatically delivers the result as checked against the formula of values. A number of prominent persons have had their "bumps read," and the privilege is free to all patrons of the Variety.

Plays and Players -:- By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

There will be no attraction in the Nixon Holy Week, which begins next Monday. For the following Easter week Manager Harry Brown has arranged for the presentation of one of the comedy successes of the current New York season, "When Ladies Meet," by Rachel Crothers. It is coming as one of the two plays that are needed to complete the subscription series of the American Theater Society.

* * *

Among the theatrical ticket brokers of New York the attractions most in demand, in the order of popularity among prospective patrons, are "Strike Me Pink," "Design For Living," "Take a Chance," "Dinner at Eight," "Alien Corn" and "Gay Divorce."

"Of Thee I Sing" is reported as destined to return to New York for another engagement when it completes its road tour late in May . . . Colleen Moore's comeback film, "The Power and Glory," will have Spencer Tracy co-featured in the leading male role . . . Earl Carroll is trying to lease a Chicago theater for a girl show to entertain fair visitors during the summer . . . Bette Davis is in Massachusetts, her home state, for a rest . . . Thomas Mitchell, former Youngstown newspaperman who, in "Clear All Wires," played on the stage the same role Lee Tracy did on the screen, is being considered as director of another newspaper play, "Man Bites Dog" . . . There is a current Italian talkie, "Fra Diavolo," M-G-M is making an English version, and Laurel and Hardy have just completed a feature comedy based on the old comic opera, which is titled "The Devil's Brother" . . . In two weeks the Abbey Theater Company of Irish players will have completed seven weeks in Chicago, and then will leave for Boston for the final engagement before returning home . . . Edna May Oliver is to be co-featured with Herbert Mundin in a film, "It's Great To Be Alive" . . . Lenore Ulric, once reported to be slated for "Naked Woman," isn't . . . Wynne Gibson and Edmund Lowe will be co-starred on the screen in "On Probation" . . . For the opening of "King Kong" in Hollywood Buster Keaton drove to the theater on a motorcycle, his new bride, evening-gowned, in the side-car . . . Adrienne Ames is in New York on vacation after completing work in the Maurice Chevalier film, "A Bedtime Story" . . . Val and Ernie Stanton, vaudeville partners for a quarter of a century, have separated, and there is report that both will retire permanently from the stage . . . Irene Browne and Valerie Taylor have been signed for the support of Leslie Howard in the screen version of his stage success, "Berkeley Square."

Comedy

How Do Women in the Movies Manage?

Filming a picture means weeks of work without a pause. The star can't stop because she is "indisposed!" Monthly sickness does not excuse her. If you know some woman who is in pictures, she will tell you how Hollywood women manage during those pain periods. Try to find even an "extra" girl who doesn't carry Midol with her!

Midol was a marvelous discovery. It isn't harmful. It isn't a narcotic. But it acts in seven minutes—ends all pain or discomfort for hours at a stretch! Just ask for Midol at any drug store.

Broadways of the World
All In A Day
By Mark Hellinger

ABOARD THE S.S. RESOLUTE, INDIA-BOUND.—Well, here I am still aboard this floating palace, and still enjoying myself immensely. According to my schedule, our next stop is Bombay—which we should reach very soon. And I can't help wondering just what I'll find when I set foot on Bombay soil.

As I've already pointed out to you, our last stop was Djibouti, a North African town in Somaliland.

As I sit in my cabin banging out this alleged column, my mind wanders back. I think of the terrible wretches with incurable diseases who stood at the dock and clutched you when you landed. I think of the creature with a face half worn away with disease who grasped your hand as you extended a coin. I think——

But why go on in this vein? I'm far away from the place now. And after all, it was an experience to be remembered for years to come.

As I've already told you, the Djiboutians go into their dance at the dock the minute a boat is sighted. The dance is for the purpose of drawing spenders to a certain spot so that the natives may dispose of their various wares.

As an example, I stood around for a few minutes watching the natives as they gathered about the passengers who had just alighted from the boat. They were offering for sale spears and warlike objects of every description imaginable. As I watched the howling mob, words cannot express the pity that I felt for them. I stood it as long as possible and decided to look around the town.

I turned to go, when a bushy-haired gent approached me. He thrust a piece of cloth before me. It was about the size of a handkerchief and covered with mud. Just a nice souvenir to bring home—I don't think.

In my very best French—which, I assure you, is quite terrible—I inquired the price. Instantly his face broke into what was supposed to be a grin. He ceased his hysterical glibbering and answered me very slowly in the same language.

I knew the mug was sure he had me hooked, and that he was laughing to himself. But, after all, what difference? That was his particular racket, and if he made a living at it, more power to him. So, once more, I inquired about the price. Again his eye filled with tears.

"Sir," was his response in French, "business is very bad. I must get some money before my wife and children starve to death. So, I'm going to lose money to sell this wonderful artistic cloth to you."

And the price hequoted was equivalent to $2 in American money. Two dollars for a dirty piece of cloth that I knew I would throw away the minute I bought. I grinned at him.

He stopped waving his cloth and listened attentively while I explained that I'd buy it provided he'd accept a lower price. Say, half of the figure he originally requested. He grinned at me, thrust the cloth in my hand, took the coin that I proffered—which was worth an American dollar at the present rate of exchange—and strode off in triumph.

I strolled over to an ancient machine that was standing along the pier, and told the owner to drive me around the town. As soon as we were out of sight of the howling mob, I commenced a conversation with the driver of the machine. I asked him about those poor devils back at the pier. How they managed to exist in such a God-forsaken spot! I had forgotten, for the moment, that he was one of the natives.

"They all live like pigs," was his answer. "Everyone of them. All these mud huts"—and he pointed to a few we had just passed—"are just as bad inside as they are out. Pigs, that's what they are and that's how they live."

We traveled for a few miles in silence. Suddenly my chauffeur turned to me. He pointed to a hovel that, if anything, was dirtier than dozens of others we had passed.

"Now," he said, "there's a place that some of those pigs back there wouldn't know how to keep clean. Isn't it nice?"

I was about to tell him that if anything it was dirtier than any of the huts I had seen so far. But something told me not to. So I nodded and made no reply.

"That's," he went on, "where I live." . . .

By this time I was fed up with the entire thing, so I directed the drive rto take me back to the pier. I had forgotten about my prize piece of cloth. So I fished it out and before discarding it I showed it to my chauffeur. He asked me how much I paid for it. I told him.

"You shouldn't have taken it for that money," he said reproachfully. "That poor man needed the money so badly that he took a big loss."

I laughed.

He told me that I was wrong. They were very wonderful napkins—and that was the first time I knew just what the blamed thing was. They were expensive. And if I didn't want it, he'd be glad to take it to give to his wife. Women appreciate such gifts. So I handed it over. He looked at it very carefully. He repeated that I got it very cheaply, indeed. It was worth at least twice the price I paid.

Arriving at the pier, I paid the chauffeur and walked toward the boat. Another bushy-haired individual approached me. He waved another "napkin" in front of me. He asked me to buy it.

POLITICS

Roots of Split Reach To Home Sector

By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURG, April 5.—The Allegheny County Republican delegation in the House reflects a split which exists among the Senatorial delegation and has its roots in political differences among the factions in the home sector.

Mr. Shields

This split was evidenced on the vote early Tuesday on the Turner so-called economy bill. Republican organization pressure was at its heaviest point during the session.

Senator James J. Coyne and Representative Joseph G. Steedle, manfully working as at least temporary lieutenants of State Chairman Edward Martin, urged the Republicans from Allegheny County to vote solidly for the bill. But they did not. And had they done so, the bill would have passed.

The persuasions of Coyne and Steedle were unable to influence Representatives Frank Hoffmann, George Reed, James H. McClure and Thomas J. Gallagher.

Retrieving this defeat with a bare majority of 105 cannot becloud the fact that the organization is not in a position to handle anything with a high hand.

Back of at least three of these members are the shadows of Burgess John Cavanaugh, of Homestead. Senators William D. Mansfield and Frank J. Harris. Gallagher has an authority to operate in his own right through the vote he received in the Sixth District on both Democratic and Republican tickets.

Feud Between Cavanaugh, Coyne

In Allegheny County fights there is a feud between Cavanaugh and Coyne, and in the Senate there is open warfare between Coyne on the one side and Harris and Mansfield on the other. Steedle, as floor representative in the House of Coyne, was considerably perturbed at the deflection from the ranks, and there was some talk of reprisal.

Hoffman and Reed, particularly Hoffman, are understood to feel that they have received no great assistance from the organization in getting reported some measures in which they are interested, and do not see what more can be done to them than has been.

Last week there was some ill feeling in the delegation, but in an opposite manner. It arose over the old age pension bill vote, when Representatives Dwyer, Maloney, Metzler and Lynch voted to hold the bill in committee. They understood they were working under orders, at least indirectly given by Steedle.

Yet, when the McKees Rocks representative's name was reached on the roll call, he voted to discharge the committee. The four who had voted the oth way changed their votes after the roll call, when it was disclosed that the side they were originally on had taken a licking.

Only an Indication Of Hurt Feelings

They are reported to have discussed among themselves a "letdown." They are understood to have felt that Steedle, seeing that the effort to block the pension legislaion was licked when his name was reached far down the list, climbed on the bandwagon and left his associates trailing in the dust. They didn't like it.

This is only an indication of the feelings which are being lacerated in this session. The difference between the gentlemen who flouted the organization Tuesday morning and those who were upset last week is that the latter can't do anything about it but feel hurt, for without the Coyne and organization assistance which the Oakland Senator furnishes, they wouldn't be here.

One story going about the Legislature is that the Vare organization in Philadelphia, though it turned in the great bulk of its votes for the Turner bill, was not dismayed at defeat. There are some mutterings that the same sentiment prevails in Allegheny County.

State Chairman Martin had issued his first call for unified organization support and added that he would "exert all my influence" in behalf of Turner.

Turner Bill Bid For Place in Sun

There are those political observers who believe that Philadelphia and Allegheny were glad of the opportunity to impress on the state chairman that, even with bulk support from the big counties — which have deserted him on occasion in this Legislature—he could not put across a major piece of legislation. That sentiment is the basis for the belief that there will be no punitive action against the two Philadelphia Republicans from the district of President Judge Brown, of the Municipal Court, for voting with the Governor rather than with the organization.

The story of the Turner bill is entertaining. It was sponsored by Representative Ellwood Turner, of Delaware County. It represented a lot of work. It was Turner's bid for a place in the sun after he had been shunted aside in favor of his colleague, Grover Talbot, as Speaker. He was also combatting the Sterling economy committee.

But Turner stuck to his task. By sheer tenacity he jockeyed the organization into a position where it had to espouse him, forcing Martin to make his measure a major issue.

And when the organization, committed to the Turner bill through some adroit strategy of the Delaware County member, took a licking Tuesday morning, there was plenty of heartburning. Mr. Turner is not so popular as he was among some Martin lieutenants who disliked having their weakness disclosed, but there can be no denial of the fact that Turner himself exhibited some rare qualities of forcefulness.

FRAUD CHARGED IN 13-YEAR-OLD COAL DEAL

Suit Against Banker, Agent Seeks to Recover $200,000

A 13-year-old Fayette County coal deal is the basis for a suit on record in Common Pleas Court today, with Frank E. Peabody suing John O. Miller, R. M. Fry and W. Russell Carr to recover $200,000.

Peabody alleged the defendants conspired to misrepresent the purchase price of the Orient Coke Company, of Republic, by selling it for $2,700,000 in stead of $2,500,000 as agreed. The three men split the difference, Peabody charged.

"The suit is wholly without merit, which will be clearly demonstrated if it ever comes to trial."

Peabody alleged that he requested Carr to obtain an option at the lowest price and terms for which the Orient plant could be bought. He said the price was to be $2,500,000. The option provided that payments totaling $750,000 were to be made on or before January 20, 1920. Peabody took the title in the name of Charles M. Rhoads. The payments agreed upon were paid, he averred.

The initial payment, agreed upon as $100,000, later was raised by the defendants to $300,000, and paid, Peabody asserted. Miller was secretary-treasurer of the coke company, Fry a director and manager, the papers stated. Peabody charged Miller and Fry entered into a conspiracy to defraud him of $200,000.

Peabody is represented by Charles J. Margiotti.

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

Everything is still mixed up. The Congressional Record ran Blanton's speech through the wringer and it came out wet wash.

Congressman Blanton is drier than toast in a reform school. The speech was actually made by Boylan, of New York, who is wetter than a sea lion's flippers.

Boylan is indignant because he lost a speech that would have made enemies. And Blanton is sore because he got a speech that would have made friends.

Over 35,000 copies of the Record have been distributed. And nobody can cancel the subscriptions. The Record is one of those things you get whether you want it or not.

The authorship of the speech is so confused that it may go down in history as a duet.

President Condemns Political System in Televisor Address

Gabriel Over the White House

(Continuation of Chapter V.)

That President Hammond had large but apparently unrelated plans for making over the externals of the federal government became clear when he sent a special message to Congress early in June. In it he revived an almost-forgotten proposal to create a Department of Education, the true character of which was not to be revealed until later.

Another of the President's proposals was for an increase in the Supreme Court's membership from nine to fifteen. The elderly justices on that august bench had long complained of being overworked.

A third reform President Hammond put before Congress involved the system of appropriations for the government's operation. He suggested that such funds be voted on a two-year basis instead of annually. Likewise he asked for authority to increase any appropriation 20 per cent when necessary during the absence of Congress.

For years the federal government had been pouring cash subsidies into all the states for highways, schools, airports, waterway developments, hydro-electric plants, bridges and public buildings. Even in Congress there was a growing feeling that much of this outlay was wasted locally for lack of proper supervision, that taxpayers were not getting their money's worth.

The President, therefore, proposed that under the Twenty-first Amendment, which authorized these expenditures, Congress empower him to appoint a personal representative with large official authority at each state capital whose duty would be to control the flow of federal cash at its local distributing point.

Congress Bows

It was a large order President Hammond had put up to Congress. Under normal conditions little of it would have advanced beyond the committee stage. But conditions were far from normal. Congress had been taught a lesson in discipline on the tin can taxes. Its prestige before the country had rarely been lower. The activities of the Unemployed Citizens' League grated on its raw nerves; was, in fact, already weakening its stubborn independence.

For once President Hammond summoned Senate and House leaders to his office, impressed upon them the necessity for swift action and his determination to hold Congress in session until his will was worked. Interested lobbies which had long favored the suggested reforms swung into militant action at the Capitol. One by one the necessary bills, so harmless on their face, were ground out by the legislative machine. On signing the last measure President Hammond, in effect, slammed the White House door once more in the face of Congress.

The President promptly set up the Department of Education and, much to my surprise, appointed Peale Lindsey as its secretary. Simultaneously it became clear that the function of this agency was to transcend any narrow interpretation of education, was, in fact, to take as its field of action the entire adult population of the country.

Lindsey had made a startling success as a publicity genius.

When he acquired the exclusive rights of the Strombos television process it was still in a very elementary stage. His firm spent millions in its development and popularization. When he brought out a set for domestic use selling under $100 he swept the country. Within a few years two-thirds of the homes of America were equipped with televisors and the old-fashioned sound radio, which had been such a wonder in its day, took its place on the junk pile.

Notwithstanding feverish activity at the White House, which left me little time for leisure, I saw little of Peale. Pendie was more completely occupied than ever with the President, of whom, apart from my official duties in connection with interviewers, I saw little.

Loyalty Wavers

It was with something of a shock that I came to realize that my old affection and regard for Hammond had almost vanished.

The days passed quickly. Panic seemed about to rear its ugly head in every state. The wildest rumors were in circulation, but the President remained solitary and aloof in the White House.

Under Lindsey's dynamic forcefulness, the new Department of Education became very busy. It was housed in one of the great new marble office buildings which had become the glory of Pennsylvania avenue. The press promptly characterized its daily outpourings as so much propaganda for the Hammond regime.

Its first real piece of public information was an announcement that the President was going to inaugurate a series of televisible appearances before the whole country. For two decades presidents had used the obsolete radio with variable success. Now for the first time, however, one was to carry himself by sight as well as sound directly into millions of homes.

Lindsey had made complete arrangements for all stations to clear the air for an hour for the first three nights on each of the two following weeks. Department of Education agents set up huge televisor screens in the parks of over five hundred cities where thousands of citizens could congregate to look and listen. Empty theaters were hired and thrown open to the public for the same purpose. Schools receiving federal aid were likewise used.

On the following Monday the first of the President's television talks took place.

It was an amazing performance. First of all, the style he adopted. There was no trace of his irascibility and impatience.

GIRL AWARDED SAFETY MEDAL

For her timely efforts in resuscitating a man who had been rescued from drowning at a Lake Erie beach, Miss Beatrice I. Riley, 1122 Allegheny avenue, North Side, was awarded the President's medal of the National Safety Council today.

Miss Riley, a clerk in the meter and tests department of the Duquesne Light Company, was captain of the original girls' first aid team of the company. E. W. Judy, vice president of the company, presented the medal to her and a certificate of valuable assistance to E. W. Reich, another employe, for his work in aiding Miss Riley to resuscitate the victim.

Miss Riley used the prone pressure method to revive the man, whom she pulled out of the water when she saw his body come to the surface near the shore.

TEACHERS TAKE VOLUNTARY CUT

"Voluntary" pay cuts, accepted by teachers of Coraopolis and Bellevue, were announced by the boroughs' school boards today.

Coraopolis schools will close June 1, instead of June 15, according to the board, who blamed the pay reduction on poor tax collections.

Seventy-eight Coraopolis teachers waived a month's salary to save taxpayers $13,633.

A 10 per cent cut for the remainder of the term was "volunteered" by Bellevue's teachers. It was the second 10 per cent reduction.

DAVIS, ILL MAN, CAPITAL BOUND

Still a sick man, United States Senator James J. Davis was wheeled out of the South Side Hospital today and put on a train bound for Washington.

The Senator lost some 15 pounds and much of his husky voice in the three weeks since his emergency operation for appendicitis. He spoke barely above a murmur, and his physician, Dr. J. W. Shirer, said:

"You can tell to look at him he's still not well. I think he'll have to come back to the hospital for another operation. The Senator has an abdominal condition."

Senator Davis intends to go to the Moose Home in Jacksonville, Fla., for four or five weeks, after a day or two in Washington. There he will rest in the hopes of regaining his strength, and, perhaps, making unnecessary any operation for diabetes and ulcers.

The Senator's physical condition has shoved far to the background any thoughts of his trial in New York's Federal Court on charges based on Moose lotteries. The trial, already postponed time and again, can hardly be listed for several months.

The Senator was stricken in an airplane while flying from Washington to Pittsburgh, March 10.

'SPEAK' CLOSING BLAMED FOR ATTACK

Operator of 'Joint' Cast as Battler In Station House

They're telling it around town in the speakeasies and other social centers that a certain police senior captain and a certain opponent of the prohibition department are not on speaking terms.

Well, that's putting it mildly. Of course you can never tell where the truth ends and the fiction begins when they start telling stories over this speakeasy stuff, but they do say that this opponent of prohibition walked into the captain's police station and announced in a voice which had nothing of the tenor in it:

PLACE CLOSED

It so happens that he was like the fellow who proclaimed, from behind the bars, that they couldn't put him in jail—because he had been "closed up."

Well, things began to happen. The opponent of prohibition started a roundhouse right from, let's say Greenfield, and brought it up flush on the captain's jaw. A few more such happenings and the captain was cursing the Eighteenth Amendment between bruised lips.

You could have heard the detonation all over the East End for the next few hours, for a few of the captain's men summoned their courage and tossed the visitor into the jug for a few hours to cool off.

But admirers of this "rabbit" say that he wouldn't pick on a lowly bulldog.

CHURCH THEFT JAILS 3 BOYS

Three boys were held for court on a charge of larceny this morning. They admitted in Morals Court they had stolen money from the poor-box of Immaculate Heart Conception Church, Brereton avenue.

After Mike Grorindziowski, church janitor, testified he had hidden and watched the boys come from behind the altar and jimmy the box, they confessed to the robbery and to taking $2.50 from the box last week.

PILOT FOUND SIXTY MILES FROM BASE AS RESCUE PLANES HOP OFF

By E. C. SHEPHERD

(Copyright, 1933, by the North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

PURNEA, India, April 5.—The successful flight over Mt. Everest Monday was followed yesterday by a flight by both Houston machines over Mt. Kanchenjunga, only less successful photographically because a later start was made and clouds had begun to form over the mountains.

The pilots were Air Commodore P. F. M. Fellowes, leader of the Houston Everest expedition, and Flying Officer Ellison, with A. L. Fisher and S. R. Bonnett, cinematographers of the expedition, as observers.

Some anxiety was raised here by the failure of Commodore Fellowes to return at the end of the flight. The machines became separated over the mountain and Flying Officer Ellison could not rediscover the other plane, so when Bonnett had finished with his photography the pilot made home alone.

'LOST' THREE HOURS

For three hours there was no word from Commodore Fellowes. It was assumed there had been a forced landing due to lack of petrol. A Moth plan stood by with the Marquess of Clydesdale, squadron leader of the Everest expedition, ready to take out fuel or one of the special mechanics when the need should become known.

At last a telegram announced that Commodore Fellowes had landed at Dinajpur, 60 miles east of here, and asked for petrol.

Lord Clydesdale, in the Moth loaded with pickets and covers (for sleeping out in the open), started out at 4:30 with less than two hours of daylight remaining, realizing that Commodore Fellowes in the Houston-Westland plane must remain at Dinajpur all night. Another plane was to deliver fuel today.

The story of how the separation of the two machines occurred gives a striking impression of flying conditions at high altitudes. Flying Officer Ellison had arranged to keep station on the port side and just aft of Commodore Fellowes' machine and maintained that position throughout the climb until the edge of the crest was approached on the west side, at the height of 35,000 feet. There he met a series of violent bumps due to the deflection of the west wind up the face of Kanchenjunga.

BUMPS IN AIR

An accurate estimate of the extent of the bumps is unavailable, but Bonnett, who was standing in the cockpit, was lifted right off his feet and dropped again with some force.

The net result of the upward and downward currents was a notable loss of height, so that Ellison, concluding that he had insufficient height to clear the summit, turned away to climb afresh. As he turned he saw Fellowes disappearing over the edge, apparently making a straight course towards the northern side. Instead of climbing immediately, Ellison headed for a point at the further side of the mountain, where he estimated he could rejoin the Houston-Westland plane.

Ellison found Fellowes where he expected and came up from ahead and below, unseen by the Commodore. He was about to resume his station when Commodore Fellowes began to turn to port. Ellison, fearing a collision, also turned left, steeply banking his machine. In the thin air, the steep bank caused his plane to make a sideslip much in excess of a normal slip when turning at an altitude, and in a few moments had dropped nearly 2,000 feet, leaving Fellowes high above and obscured from Ellison by the upper wing of the plane.

SEARCH FAILS

When he again recovered climbing altiture, Ellison turned right and left questing for Fellowes fruitlessly and finally decided to make his own reconnaissance of the mountain and return alone.

Making allowance for the westerly wind of one 40 miles an hour, Commodore Fellowes doubtless drifted somewhat to the east. Coming down to pick up the landmarks at South Darjeeling, he evidently found the railway line to Calcutta and mistook it for the line to Darjeeling.

At an appropriate point he probably turned west and finding the Dinajpur landing ground realized his distance. Being short of petrol, he landed.

The full facts of the divergence will not be known until Commodore Fellowes returns here.

The flight yesterday was intended particularly to test the photographic apparatus after the previous day's failure and to be in readiness for a second attempt at an air survey of the southern face of Everest when permission arrives from Nepal.

By COL. L. V. STEWART BLACKER

Chief Observer, Houston Mt. Everest Expedition

PURNEA, India, April 5.—Now and then in our flight over Mt. Everest it seemed we never would clear some of the stupendous peaks that rose sheer into our view. Once I opened the hatchway in the floor of our plane, piloted by the Marquess of Clydesdale, and looked straight down through thousands of feet of purple space. Then again, in the interval of exposing the photographic plates, I opened the hatchway to find to my surprise our airplane barely surmounting the summit of a tremendous peak.

LOSE ALTITUDE

We had appeared to approach it with plenty of height to spare—then the altimeter began to register loss of height. In a few seconds we lost nearly 2,000 feet.

The peak below us, no doubt, was Chamlang. The airplane settled steadily down until it seemed we could never clear this obstacle in our way to Everest. But the fine engine took us through the great down-draught over the peak and again we climbed.

Slowly, yet quickly to one who wanted to make use of every moment, the airplane came to the very summit of Everest, crossing it, so it seemed to me, with only a few hundred feet to spare, while I labored to expose the plates and refill, each lift of the heavy camera being an exertion.

CORKS OXYGEN MASK

I looked at the oxygen flowmeter and found it at maximum, so I bethought myself of the little cork plugs I had made for the apertures of the oxygen mask and I stuffed them in. By now I had the cockpit roof fully opened and put my head and shoulders out into the slipstream, which had strangely lost its normal force.

In taking photographs I was much helped by the cork plugs, without which the oxygen tends to be blown from the mask and its flow stopped before it can reach the lips.

We made another circuit while I handled the big camera feverishly. Our sojourn could not be long protracted because the oxygen needle in my cockpit moved toward the empty end of the scale and we had no definite idea of the length of the return journey in existing wind conditions. So we turned back, and the 160-mile jaunt home passed surprisingly quickly.

Cameraman Confused By Unusual Visibility

By S. R. BONNETT

Chief Cinematographer, Huston Mt. Everest Expedition

BURNEA, India, April 5.—It was a long climb up and out of the mist and I could do nothing apart from my routine duties as observer and cinematographer on the plane piloted by Lieut. McIntyre for more than an hour as the airplane roared toward the summit of Mt. Everest.

As we got to the level of the top of the mist, peaks began to creep up in a semi-circle before us. They seemed so big I could not judge their size or distance properly. My first shot was Mt. Kanchenjunga, a long way off but a perfectly clear view.

Before we knew where we were, we came over the whole mass of peaks—a confusing medley of high mountains. I expected to see Everest standing well clear of everything else, but that was not so. It could be identified by size and shape, but it was hemmed in by great mountains.

When we struck the big downdraught I believe we were near Lothi, and we only just made it. The air was so clear that it was difficult to judge distances, and I did not become disturbed in our crawling over the edge because I thought the apparent nearness was really due to unusual visibility.

As soon as there was a clear view of Everest, after passing Chamlang, I stood up head and shoulders above the cockpit and took photographs forward between the wings.

We made two circuits well clear of the summit.

50 SEEK TO WED AT FOOD SHOW

What lucky couple will be married at the Retail Grocers' Association's Annual Food Show at Motor Square Garden, April 19 to 28?

That's a question which is giving the association's committee plenty to think about.

For 25 couples have applied for the privilege of the Food Show wedding, which links economy to romance.

The bride and bridegroom must be of high character, and all the decorum of a church ceremony will mark the event, according to the association's president, Charles Wolff.

Announcement of the pair chosen will be made before the opening date.

'Emmy' Blamed For Wild Bull Scare

Emmy, a cow, whose fondness for Neddie, the horse which shared the adjoining stall at Thomas Bonnano's barn at 608 Cliffview street, Ross Township, prompted her to follow him when he strayed, was back today, sadder but wiser.

As Neddie headed for the city, Emmy started after him. In Lapish road she was frightened by automobiles and started to run. An excited neighbor mistook Emmy for a wild bull and telephoned North Side police. Three radio scout cars marched her home.

KDKA TO TEST BLIMP AERIAL

Experiments which experts believe will mark a great step in radio transmission will be inaugurated this week at KDKA's broadcasting station at Saxonburg.

Aerials are being sent aloft in blimps.

In the experiments, a "half wave antenna," about 500 feet long, is attached to a baby blimp about 20 feet in length. Held aloft by a light aluminum alloy wire 1,500 feet in the air, the new aerial promises to have considerable effect upon the efficiency of broadcasts, according to Walter C. Evans, manager of the radio department of Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company.

Theoretically, the new system will increase signal strength several hundred times at a distance of 40 miles, increasing broadcast efficiency, reception efficiency and program quality.

To Mothers

whose children won't eat

NATURE knows best. Never coax a child to eat! Remove the cause of a youngster's poor appetite. When appetite fails, tongue is coated white, eyes are a bilious yellow, don't give small children a constipating cathartic that drains the system. California fig syrup is all the "medicine" they require.

The Child's Appetite Will Always Respond

Specialists will tell you that a sluggish appetite almost always means the child has a sluggish colon. Correct this condition called stasis, and see how quickly a listless, drooping boy or girl begins to eat—and gain! The only "medicine" such children seem to need is pure, unadulterated fig syrup.

Children who get fig syrup, now and then, soon have the appetite and energy of young animals! They keep well and avoid colds and sluggish spells.

Nature never made a finer laxative for children; and they all love the wholesome, fruity flavor of the real California fig syrup. It's purely vegetable, but every druggist has it all bottled, with directions. Begin with it at once. The very next day, your child will be eating better and feeling better. Keep on with the fig syrup a few days and see amazing improvement in appetite, color, weight, and spirits.

A single IF

The promises made by the bottlers of California Fig Syrup are true, and it will do the same for you, IF it's genuine CALIFORNIA Fig Syrup. Don't accept substitutes.

—WHO CARES, with Palmolive at about half what it used to cost

OF COURSE boys can't always remember that soap costs money—especially when that soap is Palmolive.

But now, mothers—you can encourage them in the use of this safe, thorough cleansing. The price has been reduced to about one-half its former cost. It has never sold so low.

And remember—Palmolive is made of olive and palm oils. Its color is the natural, wholesome green of those vegetable oils. It contains no other fats whatever. No artificial coloring. Palmolive is made to keep young complexions young—and to bring youth back to neglected complexions. And it is now priced so the whole family can use it freely. So why should you risk your complexion to soaps that fail to tell you what they are made from?

Olive Oil is the reason

● Master A. Varady, Cleveland beauty expert, says: "Olive oil tones, stimulates, softens the skin. Because I know that this amount of olive oil goes into each cake of Palmolive Soap, I always recommend it."

All the arts of oratory and acting with which Hammond's name had been associated were brought into play. There were humor, criticism and great dignity. In the millions of television sets the features of the President stood out in intimate detail as he talked. The face itself was an inspiration of leadership and confidence. By some extraordinary effort of will he had eradicated the almost permanent scowl with which he confronted those who worked with him.

Nation's Hero

On the screen his eyes were burning depths of faith and enthusiasm and his occasional smile radiated warmth and affection. For the first time, millions noticed the powerful jaw, and were conscious of the strength of his personality.

At the end of his first talk President Hammond had captured the country's imagination; by the end of the week he was a popular hero, a national leader who had established himself in the people's homes and hearts.

These talks are part of history, but never can I forget the effect they had both upon me and upon the country generally. It was staggering and I knew now why Pendie had been silent and evasive about them.

The President commenced by painting an unemotional and accurate picture of the state of affairs in the world at large; How the whole economic system was threatened with collapse; how the political systems of great countries in both the Old World and the new were in the melting pot; how statesmen and financiers were wrangling over gold, trade barriers and armaments, while common men were starving.

One sentence in the first address caused a howl of rage from financiers and politicians: "I realize that millions of Americans facing starvation have lost hope and faith and belief in their own institutions as well as in the men in high places who have let them come to this pass."

The Karmode newspapers darkly hinted of impeachment on the ground that the President's utterances showed that he was "false to the oath he had sworn to uphold the Constitution."

The next two talks were indictments of the American political system. In simple straightforward phrases the President stated some of the reasons why Congress was ineffective, stressed the difficulties created by reactionary state legislatures, over which Congress has no direct authority; and condemned the system of elective officers, which put a premium on corruption and encouraged incomptency. He poured scorn on the methods of electioneering which made capable and unselfish citizens of proven worth reluctant to serve the state.

In his third talk he drew a grim and shameful picture of the mismanagement of the funds Congress had voted for public works in the states. He promised that his newly authorized "minister" to each state would soon correct this "rotten condition."

Engenders Fear, Fury

This unheard-of line of attack from Washington left local political bosses trembling between fear and fury. The dispassionate and public indictment of the political machine could only mean that some sort of action was contemplated. Dark dismay entered the hearts of hundreds of thousands of those who owed their public jobs to its continuance.

Every political effort was made to rouse public opinion against the President. In several states covert attempts to cripple television broadcasting stations were frustrated by Department of Justice agents. In some of the larger cities mayors secretly ordered their police to demolish television screens in parks.

More and more newspapers joined the Karmode chain in the hue and cry against Hammond. Some of them ceased to print the texts of the President's remarks while continuing to hammer him on the editorial anvil of their disapproval. To offset such tactics, the Department of Education prepared millions of reprints of his speeches and rained them down from airplanes upon every large center of population.

"At the very moment when the press seemed invincible in its power to influence the public mind, its sovereignty has been ended. With a single voice it condemned the Bronson film and the people crowded the cinemas. It refuses to print my speeches and urges a public boycott! Millions of listeners clustering around every television set supplies the answer."

A fleeting wintry smile showed for a moment as Hammond discussed the situation with his Secretary of Education. "No, Lindsey, from now on the press will stick to its proper function of covering the news. When it comes to influencing public opinion, I'll do that with sight and sound."

CHAPTER VI

My personal reactions to the President's television talks were definitely antipathetic.

I was almost on the point of resigning.

One resolution, however, I had come to: before taking any decisive step I would have a talk with Pendie. I had missed her more than I realized.

Get Pendie's Opinion

Her understanding, bright intelligence and sweet charm were what I wanted more than anything on earth at that moment. Is it necessary for me to say that I loved Pendie—had done so almost from the beginning, and, for that matter, still do?

I hoped that she might be free to dine with me, but she was required by the President, who was preparing his second series of nation-wide talks. It was not until 10 o'clock that I was able to take her along with me to Hammond's home for a belated supper.

I talked of the President quite frankly — the change in his character, his manners and his political actions.

"Do you think the President is quite normal?"

She reached for a cigaret, which I lit for her. I kept my eyes on her without speaking. She wriggled her body more comfortably into the chair, and then throwing back her head she accepted my challenge:

"If you mean is the President a changed man from the Jud Hammond we both knew and loved a few months ago, then obviously I must admit that he is changed, terribly changed."

Four School-Age Groups Enter Play Contest Of Drama League

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG.

Four school-age groups have entered the annual amateur players' contest to be held April 25 to 28 under auspices of the Pittsburgh Drama League. These groups will be judged and awarded separately, although for various reasons it has been found necessary to present the plays on separate evenings, instead of having one evening set aside exclusively for their programs.

The Thurston Dramatic Club, a group of Thurston students, under the direction of Miss Helen C. Green will present "Romance of the Willow Patterns," a tragi-comedy by Ethel Van Der Veer. The cast includes Betty Ann Datz, Lutie Tyler Moore, Marjorie Toy, Frances Clark and Barbara Miller.

The Y Children's Theater, girls who have worked together for four years at the Y. M. and W. H. A. under the direction of Miss Grace P. Katz, will present a comedy by W. Graham Robertson called "The Slippers of Cinderella." The players are Ruth Brodie, Evelyn Eisner, Lenore Malakoff, Gertrude Forman, Phyllis Fineman, Marjorie Saul, Beberly Dobrin, Evelyn Bluestone and Edith Liss.

Three Swissvale High students will make up the cast for the Swiss Thespians' production of William Alden Kimball's comedy, "Farewell, Cruel World." Miss Beatrice Tomlinson is directing the cast—Margaret Seitz, Dorothy Smith and Joseph O'Brien.

For the fifth time, the Gargoyle Club of Shadyside Academy will enter the contest, although only two of the players have ever appeared previously. They will present "Sing, You Sinner," a comedy by Ray E. Hurd, who is directing the players. Walter Moor is stage manager and the cast is William Hague, John Weisbrod, Spencer Hackett, William Sloan, High Moor, Alfred Hunt and Gordon King.

TRADITIONAL LINES HOLD IN THE CLASSIC WEDDING GOWN

FASHION CLINGS to its old traditions about wedding gowns. There is nothing lovelier for a bride than the familiar long-sleeved, white satin gown and a veil that trails for yards and yards.

* * *

THE WEDDING gown sketched today makes no departures from traditional lines. It follows a regal silhouette with its satin-smooth shoulders and long clinging sleeves. The bodice is moulded across the bosom and finished high at the front at an elevated waistline in an inverted V-shape.

* * *

THE SKIRT is severe in line, with inverted tucks shaping the fabric to the natural waistline; the satin fabric follows closely the lines of the hips, then hangs straight to its hem.

* * *

AT THE back the waistline is normal and the center back fastening is marked by buttons which began at the back of the neckline and reach to below the waist. The high medici collar is of ermine.

* * *

THE DRESS has a handsome train. It reaches, literally, for yards and yards, spreading to a widened square, with two large triangles of ermine at the corners.

* * *

THE VEIL is simply designed and follows even more classic lines than the dress. It is held in place by a wreath of orange blossoms, then hangs in deep folds that fall toward the front.

Globe-Trotting

With the Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hellow, ladies and gentlemen:

Talk about bird stories and a bird of a story, here is one that classes the robin as the smartest of the flock, even if he does spend a lot of time butting his head against strange window panes. Mrs. R. Morris, of Avalon, opened the furnace and who do you think was there? No, not Santa Claus, but a robin. That explains how they stood it around here all winter.

* * *

Since Director Clark's picture was printed showing his head encased in a "psycograph," several Trotters have written for more information about this unusual instrument that purports to tell things about one's self. The manager of the local theater exhibiting it supplied me with some data.

It has 1,954 component parts and the inventor spent 26 years perfecting it. After your headpiece is ensconced in the metal cap, the tiny fingers cause the machine to print all your good and bad characteristics, at least 32 of them.

One word of caution: If it tells you you are a great lover don't get conceited. You might have accidentally bumped your head and it may be reading the swelling.

* * *

The article printed the other day about the use of home microphones is responsible for several letters concerning them, and the safeness of their use. I have heard of people getting shocked, but in the most part the "mikes" are wired carefully so as to not carry too much current. If you are planning to buy one, ask the dealer for instructions in its use and whether there is any hazard or not.

* * *

Letter from a fan:

"Won't you please send us your picture. We listen to you every day and want to put the picture on the radio (at this point hat gets two sizes too small) so we can see how funny you look, especially when you mention that foamy brew. (Plop. Hat falls over ears.)

Councilman Robert Garland called since it was reported to him that I mentioned something about daylight saving. He thought maybe I said we were not going to have it. I didn't and he assures me we'll have it. This makes its sixteenth year and Mr. Garland fathered the idea.

Gabby Game Only Life—Winchell

By AIRCASTER

Winchell confides:

"Yeah, it's a dizzy business all right, but believe me, I wouldn't do anything else in the world."

So saying, Walta, whose forte is pumping people for news and spreading it to the four winds via his column and NBC networks, decided to break down, and I, adopting the Winchellian outlook on things in general, to pass on his remarks.

"It's a funny racket, this gabbing game . . . but all Broadway is my backyard and you couldn't pry me loose with a part opposite Glorious Garbo.

"I'll let you in on a little secret. You've got to pump people for news—but pump hard enough and you'll get pahlenty. You generally can find a lead in the very person who promised not to tell.

"They call me a notorious gossip. They accuse me of violating everybody's confidence. But the big idea is to get the news before the other guy. News always leaks, and I can't promise people I won't print it, y' know."

And there you have Winchell's viewpoint—direct from the breezy reporter whose scoops you read daily in the Sun-Telegraph.

* * *

Hamilton Beck, the baritone soloist with the Denison University Glee Club on WCAE today at 2:30, is a graduate of the Wilkinsburg High School and won a place in the club at his first audition . . . Bud Cooper, KQV program director, plays around with water colors in his spare moments . . . Ben Bernie likes to play bridge during the wee small hours before the dawn . . .

* * *

A. R. H., NORTH SIDE: The Banjoleers are Lee and Don Hancox, Irving Rosenholtz and Billy Ross, tenor.

MARTHA: Gus Van's right name is August Von Glahn. Like many others who came to radio from the stage, Pearl resorts to appropriate costumes during his broadcasts.

Seals to Salute Golf Season

Men Who Are Weaklings Lose Respect of Women

Have you a nagger in the home?
Or in the office?
If so, what makes them get that way?
And what do you do about it?
James R. wants to know. For, according to him, he's living with The World's Record Nagger.

Dear Miss Robinson:

Having been a reader of your column for several years, I am coming to you about some of the conditions that exist in my home life.

I have been married for almost 25 years to a woman who, from the very first, has been fault-finding, super-critical, tactless and sharp-tongued.

I have made a good living for her. We have joint savings and checking accounts, and she has everything she needs in the way of credit, with no strings on it. She can buy almost anything she wants, without asking me. I have always given her "carte blanche" in all matters pertaining to the running of our home.

Yet she very seldom has a good word for anyone, including me. She criticizes me on the least provocation, and seems happiest when she can do it in the presence of others, particularly strangers. I have strongly resented her doing this, but to no avail.

This morning at breakfast I mentioned that I had read an advertisement of a sale on certain canned fruit that we both like very much. A third person was having breakfast with us, and when I spoke of this sale my wife went into a regular tirade; told me to "shut up and mind my own business." Think of it! I, her husband, can't even make a casual remark like that, without bring on an outburst.

CRITICISM CONTINUOUS

If I ask her a question that takes a simple "yes" or "no" answer, I can't remember the time when she ever answered that way. Instead, she will always go all around the answer and up with some critical and sarcastic remark I have tried to shame her out of this, but without result.

She takes great delight in her untactful and "outspoken" attitude toward almost everything. When I ask her why, in Heaven's name, does she insist on bringing down coals of fire on her head, when things don't concern her, nine times out of ten her answer is that "No one can make a fool out of her, and she doesn't care a hoot what people think of her." This attitude embarrasses me beyond words.

On the other hand, she is a fine housekeeper, and everything she cooks is delicious and daintily prepared. But her continual criticism and sarcasm are getting under my skin to such an extent that I'm at my wit's ends about what to do to keep our mariage from going on the rocks.

I've been always faithful to her. I don't drink. I have sincerely tried to make her happy; but, sad to say, I don't seem to have succeeded. My patience is just about exhausted. Can you, or anyone, tell me how this unhappy situation can be straightened out?

JAMES R.

WEAKNESS DISCOVERED

What makes her that way?
You make her that way, Jim.
You make her that way by your spinelessness; by your downright unmanliness. No woman respects or admires a weak man—and there's a reason for it.

The very urge that drives a woman to marriage—the urge to make a home and have a family—also makes her desire a strong mate. That isn't a modern feminine quirk. It's as old as the human race. Wives want strong men, because only a strong man makes a good father. It was so in the days when we all lived in caves, and it is so today when we live in apartment houses. Women hate weaklings.

And the woman who discovers weakness in her husband feels that she has been cheated—and punishes him accordingly.

Why does your wife nag you? Because you take it. And the more you take it, the more she despises you.

The average woman would rather have a man beat her than cringe before her—as any police sergeant can tell you.

I'm holding no brief for your wife. She seems to me thoroughly detestable. Yet any woman can understand how your wife got that way.

Then what are you to do? Be a man! Stop keeping your patience. Stage a scene she'll never forget.

Parasite Women Pursue Successful Men, Says Fay King

By FAY KING

Because these women think only of their own interests, they can be more flattering and agreeable than wives who think first of their husbands' welfare. Wives often find it necessary to disagree and advise their husbands for their own good. The more right wives are, the more husbands resent this.

The other woman's triumph in a domestic triangle depends more upon a man's vanity than her own powers. Too many men want to prove they are Don Juans, and imagine their more sensible friends envy them their "way with women."

In most cases, the other woman is inferior to his wife, and he is just a fool in the matter.

Identity of Strange Intruder Puzzles Party

The sound, which I interpreted as that of snapping branches beneath the feet of some person upon a path near our own, persisted until I was sure that my ears instead of my imagination were responsible for my belief that there was a spy upon our trail. But there was no indication upon the part of the men of our party that they attached any significance to the sound, or, indeed, that they had heard it. Mary's hand, however, was gripping mine tensely, significantly, and leaning close to her I whispered "Do you hear anything?"

I almost shrieked as across my shoulder Hugh Grantland's sinewy arm came swiftly, and his hand closed over my lips tightly. Then his lips brushed my ear and I heard the one murmured word, "Quiet!" before he released me and stepped back.

It was but a few seconds later that Hugh Grantland passed Mary and me and laid his hands upon the shoulders of Harry Underwood and Philip Veritzen.

The snapping of the sticks upon the other path were distinctly audible now, but it was only a second or two before they ceased as abruptly as ours. And then there spread over us the hushed silence of a wilderness region at night. It seemed as though even the wild things abroad held their breaths with ours, for there was no rustle of the grass, no stealthy growl, no drowsy cheep of a bird to break the silence.

HEAR SOUNDS AGAIN

It was perhaps not even a full minute that we stood thus silent and waiting, but it was long enough to convince me that my imagination had not been "working overtime," as Dicky so often tells me. I knew also that Hugh and the others shared my belief that someone was trailing us, and had stopped when we did.

Hugh returned to his post at my father's side, behind Mary and me, and Harry Underwood and Philip Veritzen began moving slowly forward. A few seconds later I heard again the stealthy snapping of branches to the right of us, and knew that the unknown trailer had also resumed his ascent of the mountain.

I was sure of something else, also, after another minute had passed. The trails were converging. Did the person of the other trail know this, or—

Harry Underwood, in front of us, suddenly increased his stride, and in another second was lost to sight in the darkness. I felt my throat constrict and go dry, while Mary's fingers dug into my arm. Marion's stepfather, the most powerful, physically, of our group, had gone on ahead to meet and cope with that unknown person on the other trail.

MINUTES OF ANXIETY

Philip Veritzen slowed his pace as soon as Harry disappeared, and of course that made the rest of us suit our progress to his. I was sure that this was because of instructions from Hugh, given during the brief time that he had forged ahead of us, although we had heard no sound of his voice. It was quite patently Hugh's idea to keep the person on the other trail believing that we were an unbroken party, in ignorance of any presence in our vicinity but our own.

It was perhaps two minutes later that Hugh went past us again, and, halting, brought us close around him. He said no word, but a sweeping gesture, a pointing hand, showed us that we were at the converging point of two trails. Ours was the main one. The other, upon which we had heard the snapping of dry branches, was a shorter one, running into ours.

I understood the message conveyed by Hugh's pointing hand. It was down that path that Harry Underwood had gone to meet the unknown climber. We were to wait here the outcome of that encounter.

It seemed hours that we stood there, although it was in reality less than a half minute. Then, from the direction in which Harry had gone, there came the sound of two bodies crashing together, and down into the underbrush.

Correct Manners

Pink or Blue

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please give me some advice about baby clothing? In what color should a baby boy be dressed, in pink or in blue?

W.

This question as to whether it should be pink for girl babies and blue for boy babies or pink for boys and blue for girls has never been unanimously determined by authorities. I wish that it would be. But in general pink is assigned to girls, and the more sturdy color, blue, is assigned to boys. And this does seem, as far as colors go, to be appropriate.

The question is solved charmingly, I think, by the mode of dressing all babies these days in all-white, and this seems to be the new "fashion note" for these newcomers!

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

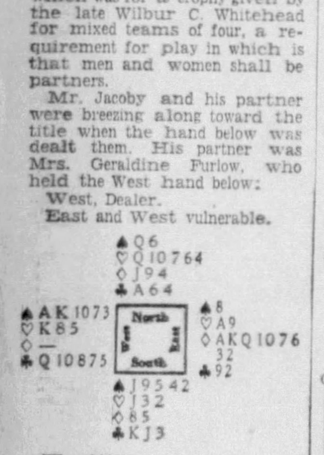
By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Inhibiting a Lead

"It stopped the lead, but it didn't stop the bidding," remarked Mr. Oswald Jacoby, a member of the new championship mixed team-of-four after a rueful experience with a bid made to inhibit a lead. It was during the recent Eastern championship tournament, held in New York, the last event of which was for a trophy given by the late Wilbur C. Whitehead for mixed teams of four, a requirement for play in which is that men and women shall be partners.

Mr. Jacoby and his partner were breezing along toward the title when the hand below was dealt them. His partner was Mrs. Geraldine Furlow, who held the West hand below:

West, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.



The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♣ (1)	Pass
4 ♣ (2)	Pass	4 ◇ (3)	Pass
6 ♣ (4)	Pass	6 ◇	Pass
7 ♣ (5)	Pass	7 ◇ (6)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—Mr. Jacoby believes that a Slam is possible in diamonds if he can prevent a club lead; hence this bid, designed to prevent such a lead. He regards it as entirely safe because he has a higher-ranking suit to which he plans to return, provided his partner strongly supports clubs.

2—His partner, of course, is unaware of the nature of his bid.

3—Disclosing his real suit.

4—The nature of the club bid is, as yet, unrevealed.

5—Those who play with fire cannot avoid being burned sometimes. Void of diamonds, West cannot be blamed for reading the bidding as asking her to make a choice between two suits in which to play the Grand Slam.

6—Mr. Jacoby has no other course, although quite certain he has gone too high.

In the play, a heart was opened, and not a club, but even with this advantageous lead, the contract still was defeated 1 trick. It was a case, as Mr. Jacoby pointed out, of being able to inhibit a lead, but not inhibit a partner from bidding.

TODAY'S QUESTION

♠ A J 2 ♡ A 8 7 4 2 ◇ — ♣ K 10 8 6 2

Answer: One heart. Although the hand contains support for a response in any other suit, it contains but 2½ honor-tricks, and the Overcall is to be preferred.

Household Hints

Salt sprinkled on coal dust made into briquettes will help these to burn brightly.

To keep ants out of cupboards or larder during the summer months, lay a few cloves here and there on the shelves. Ants never come where cloves are.

Before wearing new silk stockings, soak them in cold water for a few hours. This strengthens the threads and lengthens the life of the stockings.

Left-over spiced pickle juice or the juices left from bottled pickles is excellent to use poured over whole or sliced ham when baking. It may also be used to thin salad dressings.

PITCHERS PLEASE GIBSON

SPORT COMMENT

By James J. Long

Dawson Quits Baseball. Feels Safer in Airplane. Training Trips Ballyhoo.

UNHURT FLYING, BREAKS ARM PITCHING

THE AKRON DISASTER notwithstanding, Joe Dawson sees less danger in the air than on the ball field. The former Pirate pitcher, who did a comeback last year with the Kansas City club in the American Association, has returned to Pittsburgh, and he told Al Gough, of the Sun-Telegraph, that he means hereafter to stick to the airways. Dawson has been flying for 15 years without serious mishap. Returning to give baseball another whirl, he came up with a broken arm. That decided him. He thinks flying is safer.

Joe Dawson

Joe snapped a bone in his right arm on September 6 last year while pitching for Kansas City against Donie Bush's Minneapolis club. The bone was broken off near the elbow joint and the hurler was laid up for 12 weeks. Surgeons wanted to amputate the arm, but Dawson vetoed the suggestion. He needed that arm to curl around the stick and continue his aviation. Now he's back in Pittsburgh to stay and he's flying again. A few days ago Joe got a contract to fly off the county airport. He bought a new Stinson cabin monoplane and is operating a taxi sight-seeing service off the county port. To keep the wolf out of the air, he is also acting as broker for several airplane concerns, so if you should happen to want to buy a plane, Joe can produce.

DAWSON NOT ONLY did a neat job of pitching last year, winning 11 games against 10 defeats for a sixth-place club, but he was one of the leading hitters of the association, with the healthy average of .371, only five points behind the league champion, Ruble, of Minneapolis.

Joe repeats that he's out of baseball for good, and in aviation, also for good. He's flying under the latest state and federal government provisions, carrying passengers and insuring them against anything and everything that could possibly happen to them in the air. He wants John Public and boys to know he's running a first-class air service.

DAWSON STARTED FLYING in 1918 in the United States Naval air service. When he returned home he started pitching baseball and in 1922 he joined the Kansas City club. He pitched two seasons for the Blues and then went to Louisville, coming to the Pirates in 1927. Getting the aviation bug again he took up sport flying.

Leaving the Pirates in 1929, Joe formed the Dawson-Babcock Corporation, operating a flying school, sight-seeing trips, and later a passenger line to Miami, Fla. Last year, Dawson gave up the flying game to go back to baseball, but he has had enough. "Flying's got it all over baseball," he says. "I'm off the diamond for good and I'm staying in the air, where it's safe. I never broke an arm in an airplane."

AS TRAINING TRIPS cost from $20,000 to $40,000, it is argued that doing away with them would mean a big saving. But there is another angle to be considered. Conditioning is not the sole object of training jaunts. They serve for ballyhoo purposes, too. Countless columns of publicity are gained from the camps, and the fans are steamed up by reports of the club coming from far away. An interest in the players, an eagerness to see them in action, is developed that would not be in evidence if the squad trained at home. In the latter case the edge would be worn off and baseball would offer far less novelty when opening day arrived. As it is, the community is wrought up by the home coming of the team and the extra receipts in the early games go far toward balancing the expense of the training tours.

Jewel Ens

WHILE MOST BASEBALL men believe that the National League pennant this year lies between the Pirates and the Cubs, with others favoring the Cardinals and some conceding the Dodgers a chance, it is the opinion of Jewel Ens that they're all wrong.

The former Pirate manager, now coach for Donie Bush in the handling of the Reds, thinks that the flag winner will not be any of the clubs named. It is his prediction that a dark horse will take the honors, and that the team leading the way at the finish of the race will be the Phillies.

ENS DOES NOT share the general opinion that in the departure of George Davis and Ray Benge, to say nothing of the fact that Don Hurst is not in, the Phils have lost too much to be dangerous.

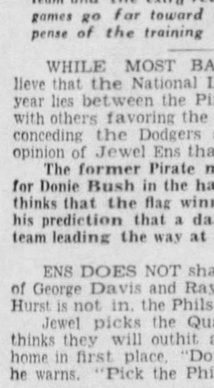
Jewel picks the Quakers because of their batting punch, and thinks they will outhit all rivals to an extent that will bring them home in first place. "Don't go haywire about the Pirates and Cubs," he warns. "Pick the Phillies. They will overpower the league."

"I DON'T SEE, honestly, how any fellow playing college football nowadays can be said to be enjoying himself," a former all-America player on the coast is quoted. "College football isn't fun—it's a matter of life or death. The kids stand out there shaking in their shoes, wondering what they've done wrong and what they're going to be bawled out for next. The thing that keeps most of them out for football is the hope that they may make the team and perhaps be able to cash in some way or other on the reputation they earn. The idea of playing the game just for the fun in it apparently has been lost sight of by players, coaches and colleges. If you aren't out there to do or die for dear old Whoozis you just naturally don't belong. There's no longer any fun in it."

EVIDENCE OF THE shortage of athletic funds in the treasuries of the big colleges strikes side-line observers forcibly in the Princeton football schedule for 1933. For many years Princeton has clung to a slate of seven games, but because of a depleted income, nine contests have been arranged for next fall.

It is recalled that only a couple of seasons ago, Princeton, Yale and Harvard were talking of cutting gridiron schedules to three or four games. The depression has stopped all such talk, however, and programs of eight or nine events are being arranged, with most of the games of major caliber. Hard times ended over-emphasis comment.

IN ADVOCATING AT the college basketball coaches' convention in New York tomorrow, Friday and Saturday, the elimination of the center tap play, Dr. H. C. Carlson, Pitt mentor, will have a strong ally in Nat Holman, former pro star and now coach of the College of the City of New York.



Nat Holman

Holman, favoring a throw-in play from the sidelines after each goal as a substitute for the tap-off, is more than ever convinced of the merits of the proposed change since he staged a test game between two picked teams the other night with the tap eliminated.

HOLMAN CONTENDS THAT the center tap puts too great a premium on mere size in a sport that is supposed to stress skill rather than height. In the past, physical superiority rather than playing ability has given a team with a big center an indisputable advantage that has been hard to overcome. Abolishing the center tap might do away with the big man in basketball, but Holman, like Dr. Carlson, argues that it would speed up the game. Originally, it was Nat's idea to give the ball to the team that has been scored on to throw in from the sidelines right after the goal, but now he favors a plan whereby the teams will take the ball alternately after every score, throwing it into play as is now done on an outside ball. The proposed change is certain to meet stiff opposition. Several coaches hold that the center tap is one of the thrilling parts of the game.

JACK SHRICKER NAMED LEADER OF RING TEAM

By JESS CARVER

The record book is dotted with instances of co-captain arrangements for college athletic varsities, but those pages detailing the doings of triple-captains is as blank as Buster Keaton's pan.

After next year's basketball season, however, the compilers of the records will be able to jot down the name of the University of Pittsburgh as being the first institution to use the triple, rotating leader system, which is to be put into effect by Dr. H. C. Carlson next campaign.

LETTERMEN ANNOUNCED

Dr. Carlson, after announcing his lettermen for the 1932-33 drive, today said that he'd employ three veteran leaders next winter. Russ Ochsenhirt, Don McCamant and Charley Hughes will alternate as Pitt captains, with the first game's leader being decided probably on the flip of a coin, provided there are any coins to be had.

Ochsenhirt entered Pitt from Perry High School, McCamant from Sharon and Hughes from Hollidaysburg. Hughes has a kid brother, Skippy, set for one of the forward jobs next winter and another brother has been elected captain of the court team at Dickinson College.

Captain and all-America forward Don Smith; Russ Ochsenhirt, center and guard; Charley Hughes, guard; Don McCamant, guard; Rocco Cutri, guard; William Hughes, forward, and William Follansbee II,I student manager.

SHRICKER HONORED

Pitt also has announced varsity awards for the swimmers and boxers and has named Jack Shricker, twice Intercollegiate Conference 155-pound champion, captain-elect of the ring team. Shricker went to the finals in the annual A. M. A. amateur boxing tournament, which was completed at the Keystone Club Monday night.

MEET PLANS CHANGED

Although both the Pitt and scholastic swimming meets are on the books for Saturday, there will be no conflict in the times, and high school squads will be able to compete in both events.

The Pitt meet, 15 years older than the Tartan affair, is an individual championship carnival. Tech's is strictly a relay meet.

Coach Corr has moved the fancy diving from the afternoon program to the evening list of events, thus assuring the completion of the qualifying trials by 3 o'clock, the time the Tech meet is scheduled to get under way.

40-yard free style—Rollinger, Erie Academy, 1933, :18 4-5.
220-yard free style—A. Labetts, Munhall, 1932, 2:26.

PIRATES LOSE SECOND GAME TO SOX, 4-1

By CHARLES J. DOYLE
Staff Correspondent.

AMARILLO, Tex., April 5.—Convinced that he has four or five regular pitchers who can go the route, Manager Gibson, of the Pirates, stated today he would put his first choice sharpshooters on a tapering diet to point them for the championship tests which are to begin one week from today in Cincinnati.

Gibby feels that Remy Kremer, the big question mark of the Pittsburgh staff, has slowly but surely removed himself from the doubtful stage. The Frenchman worked five rounds against the White Sox in El Paso yesterday, and while the Chicago boys were credited with three runs, Remy should have shut the door in their faces.

LINDY DROPS FLY

Fred Lindstrom dropped a long fly off the bat of Al Simmons on a wind-swept field. Fred had both hands on the ball and should have been penalized with an error just as any minor league player would be penalized under the same circumstances. Later in the contest, Fred nailed a drive that required fielding skill of a much higher degree. The White Sox won the contest, 4 to 1, largely on Lindstrom's failure to hold the ball.

Two runners were on the sacks, and Simmons also tallied on the play when Piet handled the relay poorly.

Ed Durham, former Red Sox star, held the Pirates to three hits.

But to get back to the Pirate pitching staff. The boss man, Gibson, thinks everything will be O. K., even if the Pirates draw Eppa Rixey in the opener. Eppa Jeppa cannot last against any other club, but the southpaw attack of the Pirates was a setup for the vet last year, and Donie Bush may have him all set for the Pittsburghers.

Gibson believes French, Meine, Swift, Chagnon and perhaps Kremer and Swetonic will answer a nine-inning roll call beginning with next Wednesday. French has the inside track to pitch the game, but the events of the next few days will have a strong bearing on the selection.

MEINE, HARRIS SET

Heinie Meine and Bill Harris will go through with the tapering system today as the Pirates take on the Sox in the third game of the series. The one-day stands, by the way, are proving a howling success, financially. The El Paso ball orchard held more than 3,000 people yesterday. Paul Gregory will start today's game for the American Leaguers.

Al Simmons nicked Charley Wood for a long homer in the sixth inning of yesterday's game. The Pirates scored their only run in the fourth on Traynor's walk and Vaughan's double.

Chilly Sauce

The Pirates and White Sox will be piling sand out of their hair until Decoration Day after their experience in El Paso.

The El Pasoans showed the big leaguers a ball park that would shame many of the major league orchards, and the fans turned out in a generous way, but windstorm arrived at game time.

Before the game started, a committee representing the El Paso Chamber of Commerce stepped to the plate and presented Honus Wagner with a basket of flowers. Wagner hit the first pitch and ran to third base to give the fans a laugh.

Most of the Pirates went over the International bridge for a little tour of Juarez before leaving El Paso last night. Manager Gibson, a stickler on rules, warned his athletes about their behavior.

One of the Pirate wits came up with a smash remark in connection with Gibson and his rules. Said the jokster:

"We'll be able to get over that International bridge in good shape, but its tough to slip anything across that Canadian boarder."

Wagner enjoyed a morning tour of Juarez. Honus saw a lot of places that were not unlike Johnny Nesek's, but Wagner did not go for any of the stuff that made Milwaukee famous.

Honus had to leave the United States before he found a place where he was not recognized. And the Mexicans gave the bow-legged stranger some lingering glances.

DUKES BANQUET FLOOR HEROES

Basketball enthusiasts from Pittsburgh and all sections of the tri-state district turned out last night to honor the Duquesne University varsity passers, city and district champions and to pay especial homage to Coach Chick Davies. The gathering, sponsored by the university alumni group, was held at Webster Hall.

Acting Mayor John S. Herron was the principal speaker. He lauded the efforts of Coach Davies and the Duquesne players, complimented them on their fine showing during the past campaign, when they won 15 out of 16 games and the city title for the second consecutive year.

Other speakers included the Very Rev. J. J. Callahan, president of the university; Rev. M. J. Brannigan, vice president; Coach Davies, athletic director; Elmer Layden, William E. O'Connell, chairman of the executive athletic board; James Phillip (Ancient) O'Connor, Graduate Manager John Holohan, Father Eugene McGuigan, Dave Kerr and Sammy Weiss. Paul Sullivan served as toastmaster.

Gold basketballs were awarded the members of the varsity squad and letters to Donald Moore, Art Feldman, Irving Brenner, Paul Birch, Marty Reiter, Jim McDougall Frank Serany and Capt. Bunk McGeever.

SPORTS HEAD ILL

Seals Greet Golf Season With Salute Tonight

A formal salute to the 1933 golf season will be offered as the high spot of the weekly radio program of the Trained Seals of the Sports Department of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph over WCAE at 7 o'clock tonight.

JOHN JAY BURKE

John Jay Burke, veteran local golfer and golf official, interested alike in private club and public links golf, will be the guest speaker and will have a message of hope for the lovers of the sport who feel the pinch of conditions.

A vocal chorus will be heard at intervals during the program, which also will include eleventh-hour baseball flashes from Charles J. (Chilly) Doyle, Sun-Telegraph correspondent with the Pirates, now heading toward Cincinnati for their opening game of the National League season one week from today.

Harry Keck will be in charge of the bill, and Miss Juda D'Ayne will be at the piano.

SCHOOL CHAMPS HONORED

By JULIUS LEVIN

The members of the East Pittsburgh High School basketball team, champions of Section XVII in the W. P. I. A. L. for the last two years, will be honored at a banquet to be held this evening in the Hebron Church, East Pittsburgh.

J. S. Sharp, justice of peace in East Pittsburgh, will be toastmaster. Among the speakers will be Attorney J. J. Jackson, Samuel Arner, Paul Reider, Paul Cuba, Richard (Subby) Irwin and Mrs. Thomas Lloyd, secretary of the Women's Club of East Pittsburgh.

School Notes

The football committee of the W. P. I. A. L., headed by John G. Holton, of Latrobe, plans to do away with ties in the championship races next fall. Steps have been taken to eliminate joint-champions and playoff contests may be ordered if the occasion arises. Last season Ambridge was the lone school to win undisputed possession of a championship, winning the class A crown. McKeesport, New Castle and Jeannette finished in a three-way deadlock for the class AA crown, while Glassport and Springdale shared the class B laurels.

John Teplica, star forward on the New Castle High quintet, who was chosen on the all-W. P. I. A. L. tournament team, is an honor pupil. He is winding up his career at New Castle and will receive his diploma in June. New Castle was defeated in the final game by Duquesne.

South and South Hills high schools are handicapped in their athletic activities due to the lack of a home playing field. Both are required to use the Langley High gridiron for home football games. The scarcity of suitable sites for a playing field is responsible for the failure of the school board to provide these schools with home grounds.

Billy Lentz, star football and baseball player during his days at South Hills High, will be a member of Ralph Waner's Penn State Club. Lentz ranked as one of the best scholastic pitchers in Western Pennsylvania. He has been turning in some fine performances with the leading semi-pro teams since leaving school.

Boosters of the Duquesne High School basketball team, winner of the W. P. I. A. L. championship, will honor the squad with an informal banquet Saturday evening.

Regis Heinzer, coach at Butler High School for the last four years, has been signed for another year, it was announced today.

Coach Phil Bridenbaugh, of the New Castle High School eleven, inaugurated spring practice today with a squad of 50 candidates on hand. New Castle shared in a three-way deadlock for the class AA championship last fall.

M.-A. LEAGUE REORGANIZES AS EIGHT-TEAM CIRCUIT

CLUBS DROPPED PLAN APPEAL TO LANDIS

WHEELING, W. Va., April 5.—(AP.)—The Mid-Atlantic League has been organized with eight clubs awarded franchises and two others threatening to appeal to Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, high commissioner of baseball, for admisssion.

The six original members of the league last night voted in Dayton and Springfield, O., leaving three applicants for admission out in the cold. These six, admitted at a Zanesville, O., meeting two weeks ago, are Charleston, Huntington, Wheeling and Beckley, W. Va., Johnstown, Pa., and Zanesville, O.

Cumberland, Md., and Clarksburg, W. Va., were not voted in at last night's meeting, officials said, because they had not sent representatives to two former league confabs and it was desired to limit the membership to eight.

H. L. Blye, representative of Cumberland, said that the matter would be taken up with Commissioner Landis or with the courts.

The league membership settled, representatives went to work on the season's schedule, agreeing on May 4 for the opening date.

The complete schedule was expected to be released sometime today.

BOBBY JONES' GOLF

By BOBBY JONES

Only Golfer Who Has Won U. S. and British Amateur and Open Championships in the Same Year.

Dave Sutherland, formerly professional at a St. Louis club, now of Burbank, Cal., brings up a point concerning the average golfer. He asks:

"What do you think of the average player's use of the niblick? My observation is that it is used far too much when the front of the green is wide open and there is no real need for it."

Certainly there are a number of times when the average golfer, or any kind of a golfer, for that matter, can save strokes by playing the right club and the right shot. The guiding thought always should be to select the club that is easiest to use with which the shot can be played and then to play the simplest stroke possible.

Bobby Jones

It is a mistake to attempt a steep pitch with backspin when there is ample room for a normal shot. The more spectacular shot may be more satisfying when it comes off, but the average of results will not be so good. Every requirement of timing, control and precision which we add tells in the long run against consistently good performance.

THE NIBLICK PITCH

Normally, it is not so easy to play a niblick as it is some club with less loft—at least, until the pitch becomes very short and the necessity for pitching is definite. When the ball must be played over a bunker or other hazard, it is easier to play a straightforward shot with a niblick than to bring off a trick effort with another club. But the pitch over a bunker certainly is more difficult than an ordinary pitch and run to a wide-open green. The man who pitches up to the hole all of the time might just as well have a bunker in front of him. He does not know how to take advantage of his better position.

There are two circumstances which induce me to haul a niblick out of the bag for use from a lie in the fairway. One is the necessity for pitching over a bunker or other obstruction when I could not stop the shot with another club without playing a very delicate stroke. The other is a heavy lie from which I know the ball will take an abnormal amount of roll.

LIE A FACTOR

Of course, the lie always is a circumstance of importance when one is deciding how much roll to expect. The proper order of procedure is to visualize the shot, to determine where the pitch must drop and how much roll it should have. Then to select the club and attempt the swing which will produce this result. Always favor a straightforward shot, and go to a more lofted club only when the necessity for stopping the ball makes it necessary.

BARTON ADDED TO CUBS' LIST OF CRIPPLES

KANSAS CITY, April 5.—(AP.)—Outfield troubles became more acute than ever today for the Cubs.

Vince Barton, one of the reserves counted on to fill the place of the injured Kiki Cuyler, was suffering so keenly from an eye infection that Manager Charley Grimm decided to send him direct to Chicago to visit a specialist.

Barton's departure again gave rise to rumors that the Cubs either would make a big deal for a major league outfielder of proven talent or ask Los Angeles to send Tuck Stainback for immediate use.

Informed of published reports that the Cubs were seeking to obtain Pepper Martin, St. Louis Cardinal outfielder, in a proposed deal, Manager Grimm said it was news to him.

Grimm also announced Lonnie Warneke, the 1932 National League pitching champion, as the starting hurler for the Cubs in the season's opener against St. Louis next Wednesday.

Baseball Briefs

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—(AP.)—The New York Yankees have released Catcher Joe Glenn on option to Minneapolis of the American Association. His departure leaves the world champions with only two catchers, Bill Dickey and Arndt Jorgens, but Manager Joe McCarthy thinks they'll suffice.

NEW ORLEANS.—(AP.)—Manager Roger Peckinpaugh, of the Cleveland American League baseball team, has announced the release to the New Orleans club of Bill Perrin, pitcher, and Boze Berger, second baseman.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—(AP.)—Roy Parmelee pitched one of his good games yesterday as he blanked the Birmingham Barons with four hits to give the New York Giants a 7-to-0 decision over the Southern Association club.

NEW YORK.—(AP.)—With only a week more to go, the American League boasts a six-game margin over the National in 50 inter-league exhibition games this spring. A tabulation of results today showed 28 victories for the American League against 22 for the National. The New York Yankees, Boston Red Sox and Detroit Tigers have been the principal winners for the American League.

NEW YORK.—(AP.)—Bill Manley, secretary of the International Baseball League, today announced that the opening dates at Jersey City and Newark, originally set for April 12, had been moved back a day to April 13, to avoid conflict with the major league opening in New York. The games at Albany and Baltimore will be played April 12, as scheduled.

BUTCH SEEKS RETURN BOUT WITH PAUL

TONIGHT'S FIGHTS

Fee Wee Jarrell vs. Eddie Latko and Carmen Barth vs. Harry Jacobi, 8 rounds each, Willard Covert vs. Mike Avery, 4 rounds, and George Raffa vs. Nick Cottage, 3 rounds, East Liverpool, O.
Middle Atlantic Association, A. A. U., championships continued, Philadelphia.

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor

Tommy Paul.

Last Monday night he appeared in his third main bout in four weeks at Motor Square Garden, and lost the decision to Jackie Wilson, after having previously beaten Jimmy Thomas and Mose Butch in the same ring.

Now, usually when a guy gets himself licked, he's through for awhile in that town, especially if he's an out-of-town gent.

TOMMY IN DEMAND

There's a demand for a return bout between Tommy and Wilson because of the big upset of the dope when Wilson got the nod, and both Butch and Thomas want a chance to get even with the former N. B. A. featherweight champion.

Butch is particularly insistent. The referee stopped his bout with Tommy in the ninth round, ringing up a technical knockout against Mose. Said Jack London, Butch's manager, this morning:

"Mose certainly is anxious for a return bout with Paul, who took advantage of him by coming in one and three-quarters pounds overweight at 3 o'clock and still was one pound over after indulging in a workout to get down to weight. His weight was 127¾ a week ago for Mose, yet he came in at 123¾ for Wilson, who had three-quarters of a pound on him. Mose injured his left hand in an early round, and everybody knows that is his best hand. Nothing went right, and Mose fought what I consider the poorest bout of his career.

"If Paul is not interested in boxing Butch again, Mose will be glad to take on Wilson, whom he has beaten twice and held to a draw in four fights. He'll be ready for this within two weeks. And, as for Paul, he doesn't have to come in as light as he did for Wilson. The featherweight limit of 126 pounds will be satisfactory to Mose."

'BREAK' FOR WILSON

All of which puts Wilson up in the money with Paul. And Jackie deserves the break. For too long now he has been fighting for the short end of the percentages and turning in good performances. He's in a position now where he can get himself a few dollars in return for his earnest efforts and willingness to box anybody and everybody.

Between Rounds

Duke Barry, of Chicago, who used to promote fights around here and now publishes the annual Boxing Blue Book, has the contract on Jacquette Elverillo, the Panama welterweight, who has been around here for quite a while, and he writes he cannot understand why Elverillo does not get more work at the local clubs.

Carl Montebano wants a return fight with the Alabama Kid, who won by technical knockout over him with five seconds to go in the seventh round of their scheduled eight-rounder at Motor Square Garden, Monday night. The Braddock middleweight put up a good fight until he was clipped.

Carl Gross, Braddock heavyweight, is back in training and is ready to meet any of the local big fellows. He is down to 181 pounds.

Farmer Bill Schwerin will box Don Truffo in one of the bouts on the amateur card at the McKeesport Palisades Arena tomorrow night. Other bouts bring together Floyd Walcott and Eddie Nicholas, William Johnson and Buzzy Noel, Herman La Tonne and Jiggs McKnight, Frankie Karnash and Kid Roberts, and John Burkholder and Mike Kurey.

Bucky Harris, of Dormont, former Navy boxer, later an A. A. U. champion in the South, is ready to make his bow here following a series of professional battles in Cincinnati. He scales 140 pounds and is highly touted. Matchmakers may communicate with him by calling Lehigh 7470-R.

Frankie Edgren, who meets Al Gatchell, of Cleveland, in one of the three 10-round bouts at the Arena, Friday night, was brought all the way East by Andy Neiderieter, of New York, at the latter's expense, which was sufficient recommendation for Matchmaker Lew Raymond. Lew didn't even ask if Edgren was a cowboy. He was afraid he might be, and you know how he feels about cowboy fighters since that Owen Phelps blew up on him. Edgren scored a two-round knockout in Philadelphia last night.

Arena Plans Mat Shows; To Run All Summer

Now that it no longer is a secret that plans are moving along for the revival of wrestling here, this is the lowdown of the situation:

The Arena, North Side boxing club, plans to put on the matches every Tuesday night to help defray the costs of operation. The building is so laid out that it cannot be used for any other purpose than boxing and wrestling, as a result of which it lies idle six nights out of seven, with only the Friday night boxing show to make the rent and profit, if any.

For some time, the management has been considering running wrestling in addition to boxing, but has held off applying for a permit because of the known opposition of the boxing commission to a return of the mat sport. It is ready to go ahead with its plans now, and has asked for a license, which probably will be granted.

Matches will be made through Al Haft, Columbus (O.), promoter and agent for the grapplers, who has his own group, featuring a lot of smaller men, from welterweights up. Wrestling in these classes will be a novelty here, and will do a lot to put down objections raised against the heavyweight "trust" performers.

The first show will be run either next Tuesday or the following Tuesday, if permission is forthcoming.

Incidentally, the Arena plans to remain in operation all summer as a boxing club. It can be cooled by the opening of many large windows and the building in of a skylight or two, which can be closed on rainy nights, thus assuring the fans the shows will go on rain or shine and giving the club an edge over the strictly outdoor arenas.

JARRELL STOPS COX

P. A. A. to Meet Keystone Club In Sports

The Pittsburgh Athletic Association and the Keystone Athletic Club are going to have it out at everything they can think about next Monday. The meeting ground will be the Keystone club.

The two club presidents, J. B. Kelley, of the Keystone A. C., and J. Roger Flannery, of the P. A. A., will pitch against each other on the indoor baseball team, and there will be competition in squash racquets, handball, volleyball, swimming, billiards, bowling, contract bridge and perhaps hog-calling, if the clubs can scare up competition in this line.

A return engagement will be staged at the P. A. A. a couple of weeks later. The gong sounds at 4:30 next Monday and the athletes will knock off about 5 for a buffet luncheon and possibly a few bottles of newly-legalized brew.

LEHIGH CAPTAIN NAMED

BETHLEHEM, Pa., April 5.—Mark Hendricks has been elected captain of the Lehigh University varsity baseball team.

RANGERS TAKE LEAD IN ICE TITLE PLAY

NEW YORK, April 5.—(AP.)—Straight down the path from third place toward the world hockey championship sailed the brilliant New York Rangers today, one game ahead of the weary Toronto Maple Leafs in the final battles for the Stanley Cup, symbol of world supremacy in the realm of the professional puck chasers.

That first battle of the Stanley Cup finals, played before a howling capacity house of 17,000 in Madison Square Garden last night, was hardly a contest, as the Rangers handed the Leafs a 5-1 beating. Fatigued by the five-game series with the Boston Bruins which wound up Monday night with almost 1 hour and 50 minutes of overtime play, the Leafs staggered into action as though they were skating on stilts and came out with the final whistle still trying to fight but barely able to distinguish friend from foe.

Twice in the first period, twice in the second, and once more for luck in the third, the Rangers let them have both barrels, with 24-year-old Cecil Dillon, the Pepper Martin of the series, tying the record for goals scored in a play-off as he notched the fifth marker, his seventh so far in the five games.

The series now moves on to Toronto where the Maple Leafs have a chance to regain their strength before the second game Saturday night.

LOCAL BOWLERS IN MONEY

COLUMBUS, O., April 5.—When a team rolling in the annual American Bowling Congress tournament opens with a measley 795 game, some one in the crowd usually pops out with a crack such as this:

But when a team goes out and kicks over the pins for a score of 1113 for highest game of the tournament, it is occasion for huzzas and other forms of applause.

The extreme range was spanned by the Paris Billiards, of Erie, last night, and it sandwiched a 926 game to such good advantage that a grand total of 2834 was realized, this being well in the money. Every man on the team checked out with a twin century in the final game, Corso leading with a 243.

In the meantime, another Erie team, the Eckerd Drugs, scattered the pins with games of 911, 1006 and 989 and landed in a tie for tenth place with a 2906 total.

L. Torreyson and J. Steimer, of Homestead, Pa., paired for a fine 1259 to cut a healthy chunk of the doubles prize money, while a fellow townsman, J. Saunier, tossed off a 635 to win some of the singles money.

Two Pittsburghers also picked up small awards in the doubles, F. Pack and F. Schmied rolling a score of 1202.

BASEBALL COMEDY

By NICK ALTROCK

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., April 5.—Well, folks, everything is hunky-dunky and I don't mean perhaps. They've got 300,000 idle domino stampers back to work putting polka dots between the 3 and 2 in this new beer. And I understand 60,000 guys that twist neon light tubes have been called back to the colors and are now bending pretzels. And is Uncle Nicholas tickled! I know the big league season opens April 12, but I can't get my mind off the seventh of the month.

Nick Altrock

Well, I have made my annual spring survey and beg to report there are 16 teams that are sure to win the pennant. Of course, by Memorial Day half of them will have a wreath hung on their hopes and by the Fourth of July some more of them will be like wet firecrackers. But each league will have at least three teams in the Labor Day parade. I know the answers right now, only I am keeping them in my hat where I file all my important deductions.

Anyway, the Pirates, Cards and Cubs aren't going to run away with the National League this season, and the Yanks won't elope with the American League, either.

SPORT VIGNETTES

One week from today and the baseball panic will be under way . . . Lew Raymond thought of bringing this week's boxing show at the Arena forward one night and staging it tomorrow so as not to interfere with the beer celebration on Friday, but, on second thought, he decided this was all wet and to let them mix and not spoil each other's fun . . . Thus you'll be able to drink and fight, or fight and drink, if you care to, or just drink and watch birds fight who are getting paid to fight.

Hockey people always were credited with being plenty smart with the manner in which they work their playoff series until a couple of teams went haywire enough to play five overtime periods before one of them scored the other night . . . Wait until the players' union hears about that.

James (Red) Mason, dean of local boxing managers, writes from Hot Springs, Ark., that Jack King, of Little Rock, whom he seconded, really beat Tommy Freeman at the Spa last week, and a riot broke out when the decision was given to Freeman . . . Be that as it may, Tommy has grabbed himself another win since, and ought not to lack for condition when he meets Ted Yarosz in the 10 round main bout at the Garden here next Monday night.

Jack Pallat, of Cleveland, the heavyweight, who appears in the main bout at the Arena Friday night, is a Slovak and his opponent is a Novak, first name Frank. . . . There hasn't been so much excitement in years in the sports departments of the local newspapers as there was a few nights ago when the news came that a local-owned yacht was running second in the annual St. Petersburg-to-Havana race. . . . The copy readers immediately looked up the reference books to find out what a yacht looks like.

Note to B. B.—Yes, you stick to your tennis and stay away from the rassling racket and the sandbags that knock out puny heavyweight boxing contenders in the gymnasium. . . . It is not true that fighters carry perfume bottles into the ring with them; those are smelling salts for use in case the referee annoys them and gets them all unstrung, like your tennis racquet. . . . The deuce you say!—HARRY KECK.

SAG AT CLOSE IN RAILS NIPS STOCK RALLY

NEW YORK, April 5.—(AP.)—A broad rally in the stock market was nipped by late selling of the rails today. The market closed irregularly higher, although most net changes were small. The net turnover approximated 1,300,000 shares, the largest in three weeks.

At the peak of the rally, many issues were up 1 to 3 points, but selling of Chicago and North Western shares and bonds unsettled the rails in the late dealings, and several closed lower, while more than half the advance elsewhere had been lost. The early upturn had been stimulated by strength of grains, and encouraging mid-week business statistics.

Stocks likely to be helped by increased prices for farm staples were in particular demand, notably farm implements, and some of the merchandising, mail order and food shares. Active bull speculation in several of the low-priced sugar shares was given fresh impetus by another rise in raw sugar futures. With the date for legalization of beer only two days away, fresh strength developed in the wet issues. Rails were helped by Washington reports that the emergency carrier plan would be submitted to President Roosevelt before the end of the week.

Increasing evidence that business was recovering from last month's setback, improved sentiment measurably in Wall street. Nevertheless, some quarters sounded a note of caution, on the theory that improvement would be unlikely to get far enough to restore corporate earnings to any important degree for the first half of this year.

Encouraging items in the news were numerous, however. A number of automobile makers have reported pickups in sales. The National Lumber Manufacturers' Association said reports for the week ended March 25 showed orders booked by mills to be the largest for any week this year, and for any week of 1932 except two in September.

One effect of railroad co-ordination and reorganization that is hoped for, is increased expenditures for maintenance and renovation of equipment. Missouri Pacific, which last week petitioned for reorganization under the new federal bankruptcy law, has this week re-employed several hundred workmen in its shops.

RECORD CASH FOR A. & P.

NEW YORK, April 5.—In the face of the most severe economic depression ever experienced by the company, the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company closed its fiscal year February 25 in the strongest financial condition in its history. Cash and short-term government securities accounting for 63 per cent of current assets and 52 per cent of total assets, totaled $99,084,683, or $8,535,988 above the record level of a year ago. More than double the figure at the close of the 1929 year and more than three and one-half times current liabilities.

Net profit of $22,732,772 last year was equivalent after preferred dividends to $10.02 a share on the outstanding 2,086,748 shares of common stock, compared with $29,792,975 or $13.40 a share in 1931, and the record high of $30,442,775, or $13.86 a share in 1930.

POWER OUTPUT DROP LESS

NEW YORK, April 5.—(AP.)—Electric power production in the United States last week made the most favorable comparison with 1932 since the week ended February 18.

Edison Electric Institute today reported total output at 1,402,142,000 kilowatt hours, against 1,409,655,000 in the previous week, but the percentage decline from 1932 was 5.3, compared with 6.9 in the week ended March 25.

The central industrial region was 8.1 per cent under last year, compared with 10.9 per cent in the week ended March 25. The decrease on the Atlantic seaboard was 4.6 per cent, against 4.3 per cent; New England alone, 7.2 per cent, against 7.6, and Pacific coast, 5.7, against 4.1.

For the week ended February 18 the decrease was 4.9 per cent.

The theaters entered voluntary bankruptcy February 27. Liabilities were listed at $10,339,403.93, and assets at $6,709,978.46.

"Let Franklin Do It" Stand Is Dangerous

By B. C. FORBES

ONE AMERICAN has been cured of "buying foreign." He is the editor of the North Sacramento Journal. He writes:

"About 89,000 Japanese electric lamps were imported into this country in 1932. They used 20.5 per cent more juice than American made. Thus they cost users an extra $11,000,000 annually. Where was the saving?

Mr. Forbes

"The editor bought half a dozen to try them out. They were marked 'GT' where the General Electric has 'GE' on the bulb, in a very evident attempt to deceive. The first one never was lit, the glass twisting out of the socket in placing it in the fixture. The second globe burned out in two days. The third fell apart when transferring it from one socket to another. The fourth wouldn't fit the socket and was thrown away. The fifth burned out a week later.

"The sixth is still burning, but you can bet your sweet life we have an American globe ready to put in its place when it blows out.

"P. S.—As we put the paper to press today the last one blew out. Where was the saving?"

WHY SHOULD oil or gasoline bootleggers, law breakers, be treated more leniently than booze bootleggers?

President Roosevelt wisely takes the stand that every legitimate oil company should co-operate in stamping out this destructive evil. For owners of pipe lines knowingly to transport illegally-produced oil manifestly is not only criminal, but suicidal, since the wrecking of regulated output tends to ruin the whole industry. Unless pipe line owners can convince the authorities that they are not guilty of handling illicit oil, they cannot expect to escape being subjected to rigid governmental supervision and regulation.

Knowing this column's effort to reinfuse energy, enterprise, courage into American business leaders, Walter C. Teagle, most influential of all America's oil men, writes:

"Like people and governments, the oil business has been going through a period of readjustment. Co-ordinated effort and unselfish co-operation are difficult for an enterprise, which, by all tradition, has always been highly individualistic. Yet they are necessary if the industry is currently to regulate its output to the demand for its products.

"Despite the problems it faces and an estimated further decline in consumption, the petroleum industry managed last year to maintain nearly 85 per cent of its peak demand, domestic and export. Providing state conservation authorities and the various units of the industry itself are able to co-operate in making fully effective measures for balancing consumption and output, it should be in a good position to take advantage of the first upturn in business which the working out of the nation's basic economic problems and the return of confidence should stimulate."

JAMES SIMPSON, formerly head of Marshall Field & Co., and now wrestling with the complicated problem of straightening out the Insul tangle, makes this observation to me:

"The change in attitude of the public during and after the bank moratorium, I think you will agree, was very encouraging. It seems to me important that the confidence demonstrated in our recent banking difficulties should not be allowed to wane, but rather should mark the beginning of progress based on sound principles and vigorous leadership."

"Every thinking person should get right into line with your recommendation that every responsible business leader should exert himself to take advantage of the present opportunity to get things moving ahead. I am doing what I can. I agree 100 per cent that real progress can be made if everyone takes a personal interest and puts forth a genuine effort."

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has accomplished so much that too many business men are sitting back in a "let Franklin do it" frame of mind. The government cannot create genuine prosperity. It can help, has helped and is helping. But the permanent outcome depends upon aggressive exertion by the rest of us.

PITTSBURGH ACADEMY CHARTERED 1787 ••• THE LOG CABIN UNIVERSITY ••• FRONTIER EDUCATION •••

The University of Pittsburgh had its beginning in a small, one-room log cabin located somewhere in the area now known as the "Golden Triangle." Its entire student body numbered, in the first year of its existence, not more than ten or twelve, and the faculty consisted of one or two volunteer teachers. The furniture, of rough-hewn log benches, was fashioned, perhaps, by the students themselves. In 1787, the General Assembly passed an act incorporating the school as the "Pittsburgh Academy for the education of youth in useful arts, sciences and literature."

The academy developed with the growing village of which it was a part, and in 1819, by act of the Legislature, it was incorporated as the Western University of Pennsylvania. The act incorporating the university made a grant of 40 acres of public land used at the time as a common pasture. But the villagers protested the loss of free pasture for their cows, hogs and sheep so vigorously that the new building was erected at Fourth Avenue and Cherry Way.

In 1907, more than a century after the establishment of that first log cabin school, the university was moved to its present location in Schenley Farms, and its name changed to University of Pittsburgh.

BEER RELEASES TRADE MILLIONS

NEW YORK, April 5.—(AP.)—The Associated Business Papers, Inc., summarizing reports from 115 trade publications throughout the country, finds that "the effect of beer on business" has already been translated into expenditures of millions of dollars. The summary states:

"A survey shows that hotels and restaurants are now spending $55,000,000 for modernization and new equipment to meet expected trade.

"Chemical producers feel a strong demand from bottle and glassware makers. Electric power equipment makers are filling orders traceable to beer. Electric refrigerator manufacturers are rushing heavy orders of beer-cooling equipment, and a great increase in corn and rye milling is credited to beer."

The editors point out, however, that "bakeries may be hard-hit because beer is a carbohydrate like bread and because cake and pie may lose popularity at beer drinkers' meals." It was thought, though, that ice cream should not suffer particularly, "since ice cream consumption increased during previous beer years."

New Federal Railroad Bill Will Alter Regulation

—By GEORGE H. SNYDER—

FAR-REACHING changes will take place in federal regulation of railroads if the new bill now being drafted is enacted. The text of the new measure is not yet ready for publication, but the general tenor of its provisions is known.

Much of the cumbersome procedure surrounding railroad regulation is to be eliminated. Anti-trust laws are to be waived to an extent to permit the elimination of unnecessary competition. There will be a railroad "czar" to be known as a coordinator. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation is to be permitted to make unsecured loans to railroads for definite purposes but funds are not to be used to support top-heavy capital structures. Recapture of excess earnings will be eliminated and this provision is to be made retroactive. Railroad holding companies are to be subject to regulation by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Costly Competition To Be Eliminated

IT IS QUITE obvious that for two railroads running between the same points to operate trains leaving at the same hour and arriving at the same hour is wasteful. Such needless duplication of service cannot be eliminated in every case, but much of this waste can be taken out of the expense of railroad operation if the carriers are to be allowed to pool some of their efforts. Such a plan is being followed in Canada.

The federal co-ordinator probably will have broad powers which will include the right to set aside existing contracts and to make decisions on rate questions without the cumbersome procedure before the Interstate Commerce Commission, which is necessary at present. This will make it possible for the railroads to meet competition of other types of carriers promptly as well as to adjust rates to conform to industrial conditions.

* * *

Government May Aid Construction

THE ADMINISTRATION has given up the idea of indefinitely supporting the heavy burden of bonded indebtedness of the weak railroads, but the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is to be given broader powers than at present to lend money for new railroad construction projects which will stimulate business and which will facilitate railroad economies. These loans may be made without security.

The old idea that railroad rates should be fixed to guarantee the carriers a reasonable return and that any excess over this return should be placed in a fund to aid the weak lines is to be tossed in the scrap heap. It is being recognized that even under boom business conditions only a few railroads were able to earn more than the theoretical return provided by the transportation act. Those few lucky roads are no longer to be penalized by recapture of earnings.

Any future attempts by one railroad system to dominate another are to be under federal control. The convenient dodge of setting up a holding company is not to be permitted under the new law. This means that federal rulings on railroad mergers in the future will be decisive and will not be influenced by the stock buying and selling activities of the strong carriers.

Bank Acceptances Reduced Further

NEW YORK, April 5.—(AP.)—Another reduction in bankers' acceptance yield rates, amounting to ½ of 1 per cent on all maturities, was made today. The new rate are: 30 to 90 days, 1⅛ per cent bid, 1¼ asked; four months, 1⅛ to 1½; five and six months, 1⅞ to 1¾. Rates were cut ¼ of 1 per cent yesterday.

Shippers' Forecast Best Since 1929

NEW YORK, April 5.—Freight car loadings in second quarter of 1933 will be 3-10 of 1 per cent less than actual loadings in the like quarter of 1932, according to estimates compiled by the 13 shippers advisory boards. This is the most favorable forecast that has been received for any quarter since the end of 1929.

DETROIT PLAYS GOOD SOCCER

By TOM BIRKS

When the Castle Shannon McKnights and the Detroit Ramblers swing into action in the western final of the National Amateur cup competition at Greenlee Field Sunday, Pittsburgh soccer fans will see in the Michigan outfit one of the most scientific elevens ever to invade this city in search of national honors.

Mr. McEwan.

The winner of this game will meet the Philadelphia Swedish--American team in Philadelphia April 22 in the title final. Should the McKnights win, they will be the fourth local team to gain the final round. Heidelberg appeared in the final three times.

Heidelberg lost the first time to the Defenders, of New Bedford, in a game at Cleveland.

WON TWO TITLES

In its next appearance the Green and Gold defeated La Flamme at Westinghouse High School field, and two seasons later the club repeated when it defeated the Swedish-American booters at Newark, N. J.

The next Pittsburgh club to enter the national final was Gallatin. New Bedford was the opponent. The first game here resulted in a tie. Gallatin refused to travel to Boston for a replay, and New Bedford was named champion.

The Ramblers are defending champions in the Detroit American Soccer League. They defeated the River Rouge Scots last Sunday. The Scots are present league leaders, and have not been beaten in 13 weeks, which proves the class of the Ramblers.

McEWAN IN CHARGE

John J. McEwan, of Cleveland, secretary of the National Amateur cup committee, will be in Pittsburgh Saturday evening to take charge of the game.

It is understood that he gave the Philadelphians the choice of playing the final in the Quaker City, or taking it to the Chicago World Fair in June. The Swedish team decided on the Philadelphia site.

The Flapper's Daughter

By BEATRICE BURTON

THRILLING NOVEL OF THE CHILDREN OF DANCING MOTHERS

Its railing was festooned with paper morning glories and make-believe ivy. Against the railing were little tables covered with pink-and-white cloths.

Sandwiches and soft drinks were served there, and a waitress was sitting in one corner when Sharlie stepped out upon the balcony that Saturday night. Except for her the place was deserted.

She ordered a bottle of ginger ale and sat, sipping it, to kill time until the orchestra came in and the music started up.

At 10 minutes to nine Sharlie went downstairs to the dressing room. She rolled her stockings down around her slender little ankles. Then, on second thought, she took them off entirely and put them into her handbag.

The orchestra was bursting into "That's What I Call Sweet Music" when she came out into the open space between the dressing room and the railing that fenced off the dance floor.

INVITED TO DANCE

Two or three men were leaning against the railing, watching the dancers. She walked over and stood near them where they could not fail to see her.

She kept her eyes straight ahead of her on the dance floor with its revolving couples.

That was part of the "picking up" system evidently. She had often watched girls standing there alone, pretending that they did not see any of the young men near them.

She had seen the look of innocent surprise flash into their faces when they were asked to dance by some utter stranger—a look that said: "Oh, I had no idea that anybody would ask me to dance!"

She saw the man on her right turned his head and look at her and she felt herself grow hot with embarrassment. She wanted to smile, too, for some obscure reason.

"Would you like to dance?" she heard him ask and she turned around, pretending to be startled.

The look of innocent surprise that she had seen in so many other girls' faces flashed into her own.

"Why—I guess so," she said.

And before she had a chance to get a really good look at him she was on the floor, dancing with him.

WON'T TELL NAME

Before the dance was over she decided that he was very good-looking. His eyes were steel blue and his hair was black. He was not much taller than she was, but he was stocky and well made. She could see him every now and then when they danced past the mirrors that lined the wall under the balcony.

"What's your name?" he asked her.

"What's yours?" Sharlie came back at him.

"Percy."

"Mine is Mary Garden!" said Sharlie, and they both laughed.

After the dance they went up to the balcony and sat at one of the tables behind the morning glories and the dusty ivy.

"Aren't you going to tell me your name?" the man asked when he had ordered two glasses of near beer.

"Not a chance," said Sharlie, laughing for pure excitement and pleasure. "I've never let a man pick me up before and now that I've done it, I surely am not going to let you know who I am."

Sharlie shook her head.

"Let's just be Percy and Geraldine," she said, emptying her glass. "I can only stay here until 10 o'clock, anyway. We'll probably never see each other again, after that."

They went downstairs and had three more dances.

It was 10 minutes to 10 when they came back to the balcony for a second glass of beer. "We'll have one more dance when we go downstairs, and then I'll take you wherever you're going," the man said, watching the foam sink in his glass.

Sharlie shook her head.

"No; I don't want you to."

"But I'm going to."

TRIES TO EVADE BOY

She saw that he had made up his mind to leave the dance hall when she did.

"Do you always insist upon wishing yourself on girls like this?" she asked him.

He shook his head, smiling at her. He was very good-looking with the bronze glow of the Joyland lights making his eyes seem very blue and his skin very brown.

"No. Not always. But then I don't meet you here always."

He laughed.

When they went downstairs for the last dance she broke away from him. "I must powder my nose before we dance," she said. "It's shining like the moon."

She went into the dressing room and wiped the paint from her mouth. Then she put on her stockings and straightened her hat, making herself ready for her grandmother's sharp critical eyes.

She was halfway down the stairs that led from Joyland to the street when she heard footsteps behind her.

She turned. "Percy, you are NOT going to come with me!"

"No, don't do that! I don't want you to touch me! I'm going home alone!" said Sharlie, and she stamped her foot on the stair.

"Don't be a silly little sister! You can't go home alone at this time of the night . . . Papa's going to take you!" He was good-natured about it, but Sharlie could see that he meant business.

HAS AUTOMOBILE

"All right," she said, "you can take me home if it will make you feel any better."

After all, she was 18 and no fool. She knew how to take care of herself—and what possible harm could come to her in a street car with this attractive man, or under the lamp posts of Milton street?

The thought that he might have an automobile of his own never occurred to her.

The people who danced at Joyland did not look like automobile owners, somehow. They were all young, and they all wore the snappy but shoddy clothes of the low salaried.

So when she and the strange young man reached the sidewalk and turned north she stopped in the street, her eyes full of a question.

"Why are we going this way?" she asked. For the nearest street car line was on Cherrill street, one block south.

"My car's up this way—in a parking place," the man explained and took her by the arm. "Come along."

But Sharlie hung back.

To ride home in a brightly-lighted street car with this man was one thing. To get into his automobile with him was quite another!

The newspapers were filled, from time to time, with tragic stories of girls who had foolishly trusted themselves to strangers.

THE FRIGATE CONSTITUTION (Old Ironsides)

THE SCAB MITE (Science)

(Left) It is a tiny eight-legged mite that punctures the skin until the lymph exudes. The serum hardens to form a scab, the mites remaining underneath and their feeding results in successive layers of scabs that lift out the hair of the animals. Through the irritation and some poison introduced by the mites the animal becomes sick and, if not treated, dies. Sheep and cattle suffer most.

(Center) A severe case of sheep scab. Cure by lime-sulphur or nicotine-sulphur dip. (Right) The itch-mite which attacks animals and man causing the very contagious itch. They burrow beneath the skin, making winding tunnels, where the eggs are layed. Cure by sulphur ointment by man, and raw linseed oil, tar and sulphur by animals. (Metcalf and Flint: Insects.)

THE MAKING OF EARTHEN WARE

(Left) The clay, flint and feldspar are thrown into the 'blunger" in carefully weighed quantities and mixed in water for two hours by revolving paddles reducing the mixture to a creamy fluid: the "slip." (Center) The "slip" passes through the "lawn," a vibrating brass screen for removing foreign substances and also over electric magnets to extract iron, or metalic particles. After agitating it in a machine and eliminating excess water by pressing in canvas bags, soft putty-like slabs are obtained and "aged" for several months in a damp cellar. (Right) The "aged" mass is run through a "pug mill" (a circular trough, in which plates revolve) to expel the air. It is then carried to the pressing shops to be formed into shape by plaster molds or castings. (Science.)

MAKING SALT FROM BRINE (Chemistry)

Through pipes (E) and (I) the brine (salt-solution from well) is introduced into the evaporation chambers (A-1 and A-2), each of which contains a steam coil. Live steam is let in through pipe (C) into coil (B-1) converting the brine in (A-1) to steam and salt. The salt collects at the conical bottom and is removed periodically. The generated steam passes through piping (F) and valve (G) into coil (B-2) and has the same effect in (A-2) as the live steam had in (A-1). (X) is a condenser drawing off the vapors from (A-2). This design is called the double evaporator. (Emswiler: Thermodynamics.)

Enforcement Almost Cured

When the government enforcement budget folded up like a discarded paper bag it caused enforcement to swing idly on its hinges.

The result is what we always claimed. There will be no more raiding of respectable speakeasies which point with pride to their 12 years of faithful service to the national thirst.

There will be no more fake buys, no more snooping and it means a surcease and alleviation of the noxious industry of wire-tapping.

The way to wallop the Volstead act was to diminish the appropriations that caused the government agent to rise in high dudgeon. The righteousness of his anger being measured by the amount of his salary and expenses.

His expenses were mostly for entertaining. In order to get evidence he had to make a buy. Having swallowed the evidence he required corroboration. If he could get drunk at the public expense it proved definitely that he was in a speakeasy. And that the law was being flouted in the premises, violated in the vicinity and absolutely ignored in the suburbs.

We all knew it. The government knew it. The man who ran the speakeasy knew it. And if six Chinamen happened to walk by the building in single file we guarantee they got a whiff of it in order of seniority.

But all that is not legal evidence. You had first to make a buy and second to drink your purchase. That's where our money went, me lads and people.

Now, with the budget being compressed into an economical thimble, there will be a lull in the raids. The federal authorities discover that economy sharpens the executive wits. They are going to spare the blind pig and attack the flow of liquor at its source.

They will trail it to Canada, to Mexico and to the Atlantic seaboard. They will trap the big boys and allow the smaller fry to sizzle gently in their retail profits.

The present enforcement funds are only eight millions of dollars. When those dollars are spent there will be no more. After that, the enforcement beagles can go up to New Hampshire and Vermont and disperse their federal vengeance tapping maple trees.

Now Pennsylvania's Turn

The Legislature Should Waste No Time in Ratifying the Child Labor Amendment

Ten states have ratified the proposed amendment to the United States Constitution which gives Congress the power to limit, regulate and prohibit the labor of persons under 18 years of age. Let Pennsylvania be the eleventh.

Lilith Wilson, of Berks County, a Socialist member of the Legislature, has introduced a resolution of ratification, and a hearing on the measure is scheduled for today.

The resolution should be passed without delay. Pennsylvania needs action for the emancipation of children from labor as much as any state.

Children only 14 years old are allowed to work nine hours a day and 51 hours a week in Pennsylvania, under the present laws, and when conditions are normal not a few such children are worked. Children of that age should attend school.

Social workers, organized labor and humanitarians generally are urging the Legislature to ratify the amendment. There can be no doubt that they reflect the sentiment of most Pennsylvanians.

Herron Wars on Rackets

We Shall Learn From the Racketeers' Attitude If It Is To Be His Fixed Policy

Acting Mayor John S. Herron is reported to have ordered the police to close speakeasies and gambling houses that flourished under Mayor Charles H. Kline.

This puzzles people, because Herron, as President of Council, not only did not demand a closed town, but upheld Kline and his policies.

Suspicious, people ask if Herron's move against vice evidences what is to be his fixed policy, or is a mere temporary expedient through which he hopes to gain the votes of citizens who oppose a wide open town and who have doubted that Herron would make a good mayor.

Light will be thrown on this question by the racketeers' attitude toward his candidacy.

Protecting the Investor

The Country Approves President Roosevelt's Demand For Candor in the Sale of Securities.

The President's message to Congress recommending legislation for the protection of the investing public and the bills promptly introduced in both the Senate and the House carrying out his recommendations, are received with approval by the country.

There is nothing startling nor even novel in the proposed legislation. England has long had a law embodying the material features of the legislation now sought from Congress.

It simply aims at candor and good faith in the issuance of securities—an honest disclosure of the facts bearing upon the value and safety of an investment and its natural corollary, the creation of definite liabilities and the assignment of fixed penalties of misrepresentation and deception.

Instead of the investor buying at his peril, the vendor of securities will henceforth be under the duty of a frank disclosure to the investing public of the facts which any prudent purchaser of securities would desire to know, in order to reach a rational opinion as to the merits of a contemplated investment.

The effect of putting the business of dealing in securities upon a clean and honest basis should be stimulating to markets and to security values.

It will not operate as a restraint upon legitimate business, nor should it be regarded as a harmful interference.

Anything which tends to curb and eliminate improper practices in any field of business is a gain for business.

Confidence in our markets and in our securities will return just as rapidly as the foundations essential to confidence are shown to exist.

Children Study Schools

If, as Alexander Pope says in his "Essay on Man," "the proper study of mankind is man," it may also be said that the proper study of school children is schools.

At any rate the public school system has been made the subject of study by classes in civics in the public schools of Washington, Pa., and the innovation has won the commendation of Dr. James N. Rule, State Superintendent of Public Instruction.

Public education should benefit through the study by the school children of the methods by which the schools are supported and operated. The children will be able to enlighten their parents, and when they themselves attain maturity and are called upon to pay school taxes they will have better understanding of all that is involved.

Pennsylvania Apples

The People Have Come to Appreciate the Goodness of The Home-Grown Fruit.

Pittsburgh and Philadelphia consumed only 1,321 carloads of apples from Oregon and Washington last year, as compared with 2,142 carloads the year before.

The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture estimates that only about one-fourth as many western apples are now being used in the state as were used five years ago.

This is gratifying, because it attests increasing appreciation of the fine qualities of the products of our own orchards.

Pennsylvania produces excellent apples, but they did not find as good a market as they deserved because they were not graded and packed satisfactorily. Recently our apple growers have taken a leaf from the book of the western orchardists in this respect, with the result that Pennsylvania apples have largely displaced Pacific Coast apples in Pennsylvania markets.

This is as it should be.

Open the Bag First!

(Copyright, 1933.)

Thirteen has been truly an unlucky number for American investors.

During the 13 years from 1919 to 1932, these investors paid fifty billion dollars for new securities floated in this country.

An economic expert for the Department of Commerce now tells Congress that half of these securities were either "worthless or undesirable."

In other words, because of lax laws the American people have been mulcted of twenty-five billion dollars or more.

Congress and the Administration are devising Federal legislation to protect the public from such worthless or fraudulent "investments."

And the States also have a duty to perform. Wherever the State law is lax, let the "blue sky" laws be enacted or made effective.

Wall St. and Protection of Investors

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

The operation of great minds is often encouraging to morons. During the late war when common sense had to yield to propaganda we recall that in London musicians were forbidden by public sentiment to play Wagner.

If it had been possible, it would have been put down as treason for a man in his own library to take down a volume of Goethe or Schiller. That was moron stuff and many stuffed shirts specialized in it.

Now we have it from Berlin that some one has forbidden a concert director to play "Gettysburg," a tone poem by Rubin Goldmark. Also "Louisiana," composed by the director himself. It was explained to the director by some moron mind that Germany is having "trouble with America just now," and that it is necessary to discard foreign works in favor of German music.

Happily there are plenty of minds in Germany not of the moron variety, and on the program of the Berlin Philharmonic were several American numbers. The Government was not reponsible for the stupidity of the prohibitions. But moron minds among the people can do infinite harm to nations and peoples.

Wall Street Cool Toward's F. R.'s Plan

It is said that Wall street is cool toward the President's plan for the protection of the investing public; and we may be sure that Insull, living at liberty in Greece, is equally cool; and all who have made a business of dumping worthless securities upon an unsuspecting public will be cool. But just now the public is not especially warm toward these elements.

There is nothing that is proposed by the President in his message or in the bill that accompanies it that is not called for by experience and common honesty. No straight thinking man without a trick up his sleeve can take exception to this statement from the message:

"There is an obligation upon us to insist that every issue of new securities to be sold in interstate commerce shall be accompanied by full publicity and information, and that no essentially important element attending the issue shall be concealed from the buying public.

"The proposal adds to the ancient rule of caveat emptor the further doctrine: 'Let the seller also beware.' It puts the burden of telling the whole truth on the seller. It should give an impetus to honest dealing in securities and thereby bring back public confidence."

What is wrong with that? And what is wrong with people who are cool toward that?

* * *

Proposed Measures Deal with Future

The measures proposed deal with the future. And they are built upon the experiences of the past. It is proposed that it shall be unlawful to sell, handle, or advertise securities in interstate commerce until they have been registered with the Federal Trade Commission; that with the filing, there shall go a complete statement with all information essential to an investor. There is more, but that is the kernel of it.

The purpose is to make it unnecessary in the future for investors to buy in the dark. There is nothing in this to discourage the sale of good securities; there is everything in it to discourage the flooding of the markets with bad securities; and that the public interest demands.

Because of the bad securities, sold at extravagant prices during the mad-dog days of insane speculation, resulting in the wiping out of a vast army of investors, much has been done to make the public fearful of securities. It is just as apt to be skeptical of good securities as of bad.

There is just one way to overcome this fear and restore confidence—and that is a governmental regulation necessitating publicity regarding the securities offered. When investors are in position to know what they are buying, and what is back of it, they will buy, and probably not before.

Nothing better can be done for the security market than the instituting of such reforms as will restore public confidence.

No Sweeping Disasters In England

Some of the gentlemen on Wall street who are "cool" toward all reforms intended to put an end to such practices in that quarter as contributed enormously to the general ruin in this country are protesting that the measure proposed is similar to that in England. They contend that the law in England is not popular among some people in that country.

But the public observes that there was no such sweeping disaster in England where there is some regulation by government as here where there was none.

There must be men in the financial field in England unscrupulous enough to have looked with longing eyes upon the ease with which a short time ago it was possible for the unscrupulous here to pluck the unwary.

But the Insulls there have not been able to do what they were able to do here—and the English investor is the gainer.

* * *

People Have Right to Know

And apropos of the plan here for the floating of foreign loans, Wall Street is quoted as looking upon it as "academic" just now, and as believing that investment houses here will not underwrite as precisely accurate every statement made by foreign governments.

Now the reason for the keen interest here in the protection of the buying public in foreign bonds is that very scandalous revelations have shown that some investment houses here dumped upon the public bonds they knew, or had every reason to believe, were bad. Is it necessary to recall the Peruvian loan?

Putting aside all the technicalities and getting down to the brass tacks of common sense and common honesty, the fact is that some investment houses here, knowing that some foreign bonds were a desperate gamble at best, advertised them glowingly—for the sake of the handsome commission they received.

If a foreign issue is considered in advised financial circles as a very bad risk; if the people of the nation whose government offers the bonds are opposed to the issue, even if it becomes necessary to bribe the son of a President to get the bonds offered, the American investor has a right to know as much about them as the investment house that offers them for sale.

Is there anything wrong with that?

Banking Reforms Necessary

However, we are not at all sure that Wall Street as a whole is opposed to this needed legislation and regulation. The sentiment against it would have been unanimous before some of them learned wisdom. The sentiment against vicious banking practices would have been considered intolerable among Wall Street bankers before the general collapse.

Now one of the most important of the big bankers has taken his stand for banking reform—because he knows it is necessary to restore confidence in the banks.

Always there are bourbons who learn nothing. There still are men perhaps on Wall Street who look forward to the return of the "good old days" whose practices will make bizarre reading to future generations.

But it is to be hoped that there are realists on Wall Street among forward-looking men who are reconciled to the reforms that experience has shown to be absolutely essential to the restoration of that confidence without which no one can prosper.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, April 5.—An evening with Theodore Dreiser leaves one feeling that the civilization we know is tumbling down. No other person I ever met seems so starkly stripped of illusion. The great novelist is a gruff and dour objector, without the slightest touch of lachrymose sentimentality for the past.

Sitting before an open fire, his enormous, leonine head thrown back, he sniffs the winds of life, like a mastiff, through dilated nostrils. Most of the time he barks, but now and then his voice diminuendoes to a soft faraway whine. In such intimacies, he is known as "Teddy."

Dreiser will listen, but not without annoyance. All the while that famous handkerchief, folded into a long thin strip, is being corrugated into accordian pleats, squeezed into a small packet and then released, spring-like by convulsive fingers. It has the fascination of a snake charming a bird.

Now and then he leaps up to pace, the baffled lion in the cage. Too, he will punctuate some dissertation with an absurd extraneous question. He has a lack of taste, but a ringing sincerity which one cannot help but admire. Yet, one feels his genius is shackled by bitterness.

* * *

In one of his fierce blusters, Dreiser, apropos of nothing at all, snarled: "What year was Alexander the Great born?" and before I could answer, even if I knew—which I didn't—he sneered: "But you wouldn't know!" After such sky-rocketing, he grows mellow in the manner of an apologetic boy.

* * *

Dreiser's knowledge of human affairs is large. He is a reader, as well as a thinker. But he can be taunted into expressing himself on subjects about which he is empty. In such garrulity, his conversation has the unexpected dart of a roulette ball, but he makes juicy fact of insipid understatement and haggles over minutiae. Then, with the same unexpectancy, he becomes sullenly glowering, and the handkerchief races through his fingers like muslin into a sewing machine.

Real estate in Westchester is reported as the sole exception to falling prices. The catch is, that while maintaining this equilibrium, it's rarely bought or sold. I, for instance, know of a plot of ground that cost $40,000 four years ago, which recently was offered for $7,000, with no takers.

Thingumabobs: Evans Wall, novelist, calls his tailless dog O. Henry, because of the surprise ending . . . Mrs. William J. Locke, on her one-day visit with the Bernard Shaws, was guest of Mme. Alma Clayburgh . . . Claude G. Bowers wears no studs in evening shirts . . . Herbert Hoover, for years, has remained awake from midnight until 4 a. m. . . . Reginald Wright Kauffman, convalescing from an appendix removal in Geneva, turned out a novel called "The March of Time" . . . Edison Marshall has been adopted by a savage tribe in the interior of Indo-China . . .

Konrad Bercovici's daughter, Rada, is an accomplished linguist, musician and historian. Yet she never has been to a public or private school. Her father, who is a Rumanian novelist, decided at her fifth year to be her teacher. Every day, for many years, he devoted two and a half hours to such instruction, and had the pleasant reaction of also improving his own intellectual qualities. Miss Bercovici, for instance, knows the meaning and how to spell such words as guimpe, jube and operculum, right off.

Just before the Casino in the park closed one dawn several weeks ago, Sid Solomon, proprietor, Sophie Tucker, singing there, and Eddie Duchin, nimble pianist, in sudden seizure, called up Jimmy Walker at his Riviera hotel. The trio talked $318 worth. The ex-Mayor was pleased, but conversation was monosyllabic. Asked when he was "returning to the States," he was non-committal, with: "I'll see you around."

Everywhere refined gayety is frothiest, one sees the globe-trotting Beth Leary, enormously rich, and bracketed high, socially. In vitality and profile, she suggests the English novelist, Clemence Dane. She neither smokes nor drinks, and companions are handpicked. Thus is she an example of the new freedom, but enslaved, as usual, by conventions.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

Some of these glorified fiction stories—telling how easy it is to lick the world if you'll just perk up and strike another gold mine—do they, or don't they, give you a pain in the neck?

Surely you've noticed them here and there in the magazines. Invariably the plot is the same. Our Hero is down to his last million and maybe a couple of cars. Toying with his meager glass of champagne, he thinks wistfully of the days when he ducked the whole Carrol Chorus in juice like that. Slowly the great tears form in his tortured eyes and drip slowly down upon his remaining black pearl stud. This is the end! Or is it?

Shall he perish like this, without a struggle, when there's God's Great Outdoors still full of suckers? No. NO! Somewhere, if a man has the courage—and knows the right outfit down in Washington—the pickings must yet be good. So—onwards!

Or perhaps it's a Beautiful Woman, broken on the wheel of fate, forced at last to do her own manicuring. But there still flows in her veins that Valiant Blood which has ever made American Womanhood Glorious.

Surrender now, just because her best phone numbers are in Greece, or maybe Honduras? Never! Let the Heavens fall—she still has that 15,000-acre sheep ranch Uncle Harry left her on the outskirts of Bridgeport, near all the best plays.

So, radiant despite her tears, she staggers forth into the night, clasping to her gallant heart seven dinner dresses, the family emeralds, her best tissue cream and her alimony decree.

And THAT'S the sort of bilge which is handed the American public to cure What Ails Us.

WELL, I, FOR ONE, ARISE TO TELL THE POPEYED WORLD IT MAKES ME SICK!

In the first place, such stories are so silly that they insult the intelligence of any sane reader.

In the second place, they are downright dishonest—as fraudulent as any crooked promotion ever banned in the mails. Though they are only fabulous fiction, they pretend to be serious answers to widespread despair.

And in the third place, they are wantonly cruel to the millions of poor devils whom, by insinuations, they discredit because they haven't licked life by building rent-free cabins or retreating to dude farms.

I have been one of those millions. I know what tough going means—really means. AND I'M TELLING YOU THAT A BUZZARD IS A RESPECTABLE CITIZEN IN COMPARISON WITH THE WRITER WHO WILL, FOR HIS PERSONAL PROFIT, MAKE SUCH MOCKERY OF THE MISERY OF HIS FELLOW MAN.

I read one such effusion the other night. With bated breath the authoress described the matchless courage of the young people who made the rest of the unemployed look silly—by going way out into the Trackless Wilderness at the end of the trolley line and Building a Cabin for $130 with their Own Bare Hands.

Only, of course, the Old Folks supplied practically all of the material; and the Kind Neighbors gave them their provisions in return for an hour's wood chopping; and they had their own car; and they didn't need a dentist; and their friends dropped in to entertain them at least four nights per week.

However, everything came out well in the end; goody-goody! With nightfall, Our Brave Pioneers gathered round their open fire and prepared some precious little canapes (bacon and olives to you, mutt) to go with the ducky little cocktails.

"That indispensable touch of civilization," purred the author in approval. And then, lest you still feel a shred of sympathy for those derelicts who accept your charity, she concluded, "they (i. e., the young couple) are persisting in being the people they were meant to be, instead of becoming case histories."

So it's all your own fault, Bill, if you're starving. You're entirely to blame, Mrs. Jones, if your baby died of malnutrition. For you selfishly allowed yourself to become a "Case History" instead of "being the people you were meant to be" and maintaining "the indispensable touches of civilization."

Canapes and cocktails—while decent, honest Americans scramble for crusts in garbage cans; cringe before the storm in gutter wallows.

And I thought of the woman who sat staring, vacantly, with her dead baby in her arms; and of the boy who blew out his brains because he couldn't go back again and tell his sweetheart that he hadn't found a job.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Sleep, the Enchantress

Sleep, the enchantress, calls me now,
Dusk-eyed, with poppies on her brow;
Strange gifts in her soft hands she brings,
The wings of eagles, thrones of kings,
And she has power to bear me far,
Past many a spinning sun and star,
Sleep, the enchantress, is so kind
That in her arms my heart can find
Solace and peace and tranquil rest
From all the cares which vex my breast;
And though I know her dreams deceive,
Life's loveliest things for her I leave.
Sleep, the enchantress, wooing, calls,
And straight I fly the narrow walls
Of this poor body that would hold
Me back from mysteries which unfold.
I learn the wonder of her charms.

MAYBE I'M WRONG

By John P. Medbury

NEW YORK, April 5.—A motion picture executive who has never won any prize for his brilliance was being interviewed the other morning about a certain case, and was exceedingly snippy to the reporters.

"You may tell your readers," he shouted, "that I intend to speak my mind."
